News people yesterday poured into Santa Rita Jail in Pleasanton to take advantage of Sheriff Tom Houchins invitation to tour the county jail facilities. More photos, page 24.

Press takes peak

Santa Rita opens doors—for a day

A general press tour of Santa Rita Jail yesterday gave reporters a rare look at the aging facility, but most couldn't figure out what prompted the invitation from Sheriff Tom Houchins.

The sheriff's department contacted Bay Area media Monday and announced a tour, with cameras allowed, of the Alameda County jail located in Pleasanton.

The U.S. Supreme Court is currently reviewing arguments in KQED's suit against the county which asks that the jail be open for regular tours and interviews with inmates.

Bill Foster, chief of the detention and corrections division at Santa Rita, directed the tour and said it was occasioned by one reporter's request to Houchins last week.

Houchins was out of town yesterday and couldn't be reach for comment. A source in the sheriff's office confirmed Foster's explanation but could not name the reporter making the original request.

A spoksman for KQED yesterday said the station had pointed out the county's argument that press tours were available on request. Kelvin Booty, county cousel arguing the case, talked with Houchins who then set up the tour.

A decision in the KQED suit could take up to several months, some observers say.

Major energy programs boosted

House passes part three of Lab's budget for 1978

Short-term programs cut back

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The House authorized Wednesday major increases in energy research spending for 1978. Indications are that some — but not all — Lawrence Livermore Laboratory programs will benefit.

Exactly how the new funds will be distributed has not been decided. In general, though, the large, long-term projects at LLL are in for big increases, while smaller, short-term ones are not.

In the latter category are geothermal, solar and fossil fuel energy. These are the varied areas Congress has expressed the most interest in, and is putting out the most new money for.

However, much of that new money is going to private contractors.

The bill passed Wednesday authorizes $6.1 billion for energy research, of which roughly $70 million will go to LLL. That money will cover all Lab programs except weapons and laser fusion, both of which were included in an earlier bill on Department of Energy work in national security.

The $70 million figure is for budget authority. Less than that will probably be spent. Last year the authority came to about $64 million of which approximately $59 million was spent.

Last year's total U.S. expenditure on energy research was about $5 billion.

President Carter has vetoed a bill similar to the one the House passed Wednesday, but that veto was based on his opposition to the breeder reactor. The breeder was moved Wednesday, and the Senate is expected to do the same in order to insure the DOE has money to pay the bills.

Meanwhile, the breeder is still alive in a seperate bill, one which also permits the construction of two more B-1 strategic bombers. The House passed that bill Tuesday.

The largest LLL program funded by yesterday's bill is magnetic fusion energy, which stands to see its 1977 funding of almost $29 million increased next year to almost $32 million. That 10 percent increase compares favorably with the national increase for MFE, which comes to less than 3 percent.

Talks go on

School chief Bruce Newlin has not said that he'll resign.

Southern California job

Newlin may be leaving

A large Southern California unified school district is believed to be one of possibly three districts in the state considering Amador and Pleasanton superintendent Bruce Newlin as its next superintendent.

While Newlin had no comment on whether he might soon announce his resignation to accept a superintendent's job with Norwalk-La Mirada Unified, he admitted there have been contacts by "several" districts throughout the state in the last year.

Presently on the second year of a three-year contract, Newlin said he has spoken and met with the boards and screening committees of some districts.

Though he said both the Amador and Pleasanton boards were aware that he might leave after fulfilling his initial three-year pact, neither group apparently has been notified in recent days of any pending move.

Newlin, who is due for a salary increase from his present $37,000 per year, is conversant with the size and makeup of the Norwalk-La Mirada district. It is situated on the southern edge of Los Angeles County, generally between Whittier and the sprawling San Gabriel Valley.

The district, according to Newlin, has 25,000 students in grades K-12, with a sizable Mexican-American population.

Newlin indicated his first contact, either with board members or screening committee members, was in early November.

Pleasanton signals ready

Pleasanton traffic signals on Main Street — standing but not working for the past week — will finally begin operating Monday, according to traffic engineer Ken Lamb.

The signals are placed at the intersections of Main and Neal Streets, and at Main and St. John Streets.

Saturday BART service

The Bay Area Rapid Transit District received formal permission from the state Public Utilities Commission Tuesday to provide permanent Saturday service.

BART is currently operating special Saturday trains through the holidays. The permanent service will follow directly after the special service is dropped on Dec. 31.

BART officials will also continue to work for the inauguration of permanent Sunday service beginning in June 1978.

Waste-free society seen

The day may come when garbage dumps no longer exist. Each city would process all solid waste, recycling the metals, glass and aluminum, then transforming left-over garbage into precious energy. And cities would operate these "resource recovery plants" at a profit, selling recycled products and energy to industry. This is not a vision of life 100 years from now. It could be reality within a decade, according to professionals speaking at a Kaiser workshop on resource recovery held in Pleasanton yesterday.

Early line on candidates

City council races start today

After months of preliminary speculation about who will run for city council in Pleasanton and Livermore, the race begins in earnest today for the March 7 election.

Candidates can pick up nomination papers at city hall during work hours from now until noon on Dec. 29.

While candidates in either city may submit a statement of qualifications, Pleasanton candidates will pay a pro-rated amount for the costs of printing, handling and translating it into Spanish. Livermore does not charge for the statement, but limits it to 200 words. Pleasanton has a 400 word maximum.

To run for office, a person must be a registered voter of the city. Between 20 and 30 voters must sign the nomination paper, and voters can only sign one nomination paper for th same office.

The only officially announced candidate, to date, in Pleasanton is Ken Hart, a builder. Neither of the incumbents, Robert Philcox and Joyce LeClaire, has declared candidacy yet.

In Livermore the three incumbents, Dale Turner, John Staley and Helen Tirsell, are expected to be running. Staley and Turner have said they will run, but Mayor Tirsell has made no official statement yet.

Gurnam Sidhu also has publicly announced that he will be running and another possible contender is Jim Sadler.

Supporters intimate, but no definite confirmation yet, that Planning Commissioner Bill Zagotta may run.

Livermore has spelled out to its candidates exactly what political signs are permitted in notices to be given to applicants. Generally, the subject of the sign can not be commercial and specific sizes are given for each zoning district. Industrial and commercial district signs can be eight feet, but only four foot signs are allowed in residential districts.

Signs are allowed only 31 days prior to the election and up to two days after the election. Any sign weighing more than 50 pounds must have the approval of the chief building official.

Scales to reopen

LIVERMORE — Truck scales in the eastbound direction on Interstate 580 near the Greenville Road exit will reopen today, five days after they sustained damage due to a fire believed started by arson.

Scales in the westbound direction, destroyed in a similar arson fire Sunday, will be replaced by temporary scales in the first week of January, a California Highway Patrol spokesman said yesterday.

Livermore is losing the revenue collected from overweight trucks while the scales remain inoperative.

James William Patterson, a 38-year-old Alameda County Sheriff's Department sergeant and a resident of Livermore, has been charged with the arson.

GE layoffs coming, final word today

PLEASANTON — General Electric employees will finally receive official word detailing the employment situation at Vallecitos Nuclear Center today and can expect some layfoffs, spokesman Randy Watkins told The Times yesterday.

No pink slips have been issued, as previously reported elsewhere.

"We have already told employees that there will be some layoffs, but we haven't said anything about who will be laid off when or for how long," Watkins said, adding he expects to release that information late this afternoon.

GE officials decided some layoffs were necessary during a top-level meeting Monday at the company's San Jose headquarters.

The plant's large nuclear reactor was shut down by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission Oct. 27 after evidence suggesting earthquake faulting within 200 feet of the reactor was discovered.

GE is appealing that decision to NRC officials in Washington.

Waste recovery plan needs tool—money

PLEASANTON — Megatons of garbage are dumped every year, but each bit of trash could be recycled for use over and over again through a complex resource recovery system.

Almost 50 consulting engineers met yesterdav at the Kaiser Research Center to hear Dr. Jim Abert, vice-president of the National Center for Resource Recovery, Inc., describe how vital materials such as aluminum and steel can be saved, and other trash transformed into energy,.

Some already knew and, in fact, are helping design such systems for Bay Area agencies.

According to Fred Clark of Brown and Caldwell, the only thing preventing the Central Contra Costa Sanitary District from building a resource recovery plant is money.

The district is interested in a complete plant costing around $80 million. It would separate glass, iron metals and aluminum to be cleaned and sold for reuse; then turn the rest of the waste into a fuel to make electricity or steam.

Oakland Scavenger Company is planning to build a smaller recovery plant which would reclaim materials, but, instead of actually making energy, would sell solid fuel made from leftover waste to another company desiring to make electric or steam energy. Luis Diaz, president of Cal Recovery Systems, Inc., representing Oakland Scavenger, estimates the "material recovery onlY" plant will cost between $10 and $20 million.

Both projects hinge on funds, technology and local government construction approval.

The day-long workshop; co-sponsored by Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corporation, NCRR and two engineering associations; stressed aluminum recovery.

Kaiser officials saY it costs far less to recycle aluminum than to produce virgin material.

And one engineering consultant claimed the country would never need to delve into nuclear power if private industry and cities set up resource recovery plants to reclaim solid waste.

Profits can offset operating costs of such plants, Kaiser researcher Fred Binkley told the group. Recycled aluminum sells for $400 a ton, steel for $60 per ton and glass for $30 a ton.

But the technology is relatively new, especially technology relating to aluminum recovery. New Orleans has set up a plant which is supposed to start operating full-scale next month. And although test results of such plants are good, Abert said there are no records to date on the results a plant would give running day to day over a period of a few years.

A couple of engineers questioned the need for intricate plants when metals and aluminum can be reclaimed in consumer programs in which people separate their trash and take it to a recycling center.

That would work if people would work, answered a Kaiser official. But, he added, it takes detailed effort to separate every scrap of aluminum in one's trash, noting that barely 20 percent of all aluminum used in products is recycled by consumers.

Walnut Grove program won't be cut back

PLEASANTON— Though enrollment in Open Education classes at Walnut Grove School has dropped slightly, the program is under no cloud of curtailment or revision.

A news article in Tuesday's edition, following on the heels of a letter printed Sunday, indicated a rift between the school's new principal, Ronald Begley, and teachers and parents associated with the Personalized Activity Learning (PALs) program.

Begley stated yesterday there has been a misunderstanding over his intentions toward the tri-concept educational program, specifically PALs.

Begley believes his initial comments that PALs needed to be evaluated to determine where improvements might take place was construed to mean changing or curtailing .

Concern over the three-year old format at the Pleasanton district school boiled over at a Nov. 22 meeting attended by some 150 parents and teachers.

According to the letter-writer, "At the center of the confrontation is the new principal (Begley) hired to replace the "supportive" principal (Tony Huff). The new principal has indicated serious doubts about the Walnut Grove format, especially the PAL program. He has made statements and taken actions which have concerned and disturbed the staff and parents of the school. One of the PAL teachers has resigned and remaining PAL teachers have serious doubts as to where they will be teaching next year," the letter stated.

The alleged resignation, that of Andy Jorgensen, was confirmed earlier this week. Jorgensen is one of six teachers in the PALs classes. He taught previously at Harvest Park School, coming over to Walnut Grove this year.

Jorgensen informed personnel chief Carl Krause of his decision, apparently so he could continue his studies, on Nov. 16.

The Open Education or PALs program presently has 162 children. The fundamentals program enrollment is at 200 and team teaching classes at approximately 458.

The teacher/student ratios in the latter two are 30 or 31 to 1. Open Education is 27-1.

In reviewing his past actions, Begley said "We owe parents and children a continuing assessment of programs here, and that was my approach."

"I believe teachers in the PALs program misunderstood that," continued Begley, "and they voiced some concern to parents."

Begley put out a memo immediately after the Nov. 22 meeting saying he was appreciative of the support shown by all. Because of that, Begley wrote there'd be additional time given (to the end of the present school year) to evaluate and seek ways to improve the program.

Though Begley's last position was that as an administrator at a year-round school (Dos Dios in Escondido), he has had experience in Open Education, team teaching, Mentally Gifted Minor (MGM) and self-contained classes.

His first year was spent in an Open Education program at Miller School, a K-6 facility in Escondido.

His next two years were in the team teaching program at Miller.

Begley also taught a self-contained sixth grade class at Orange Glen in the south state community, and coordinated a Title III cablevision project for San Diego County Schools.

Begley also said he hopes to involve parents and staff members in viewing alternative programs at other schools. He has been at Walnut Grove since September. —by Al Fischer

Ronald Begley called it a misunderstanding.

Final budget phase approved

And the $32 million does not even include $3 million slated to begin construction of a new $94 million test facility.

So the big three, at LLL have done well. Weapons received a $10 million boost (about 8 percent) in the earlier bill, and laser fusion got about 50 percent more authorized for 1978 than it spent in 1977.

After that, however, the picture is not as bright. In fossil energy, where Congress has authorized a 25 percent national increase, LLL stands to get roughly the same as last year, a little under $6 million. In fact, in the original budget request submitted to Congress, DOE was planning to marginally cut LLL's fossil fuel work, from $5.7 million in 1977 to $5.6 million, even as it was requesting huge increases for the nation as a whole.

Congress added money even to the DOE request, so LLL could end up with more than the $5.6 million authorization, but probably not much more.

In geothermal, the contrast between LLL and the nation is even more striking. Congress increased total geothermal funding 98 percent over last year, yet LLL — which last year was authorized $5 million — is slated to get only $4 million, according to internal DOE documents. Before Congress approved the huge increases, LLL was slated for a cutback to under $2 million.

In solar, again the national increase is about 25 percent. But the Lab will get the same $.5 million it received last year.

The Lab's various biomedical and environmental research efforts are also slated to hold about even, at a total of about $9 million, although construction and capital equipment authorization — a seperate category from operations — are going up in that area to $3.5 million from $1.6 million.

In DOE programs elsewhere in the same general area, budget increases for operations are averaging about 12 percent.

In the realm of conservation research, LLL goes from $2 million to $2.4 million, as DOE in general doubles its national expenditures to about $300 million.

Why the difference between the big LLL projects and the small ones? One DOE official, asking not to be identified, said "The big Labs do the big things well."

As he went on to note, the whole purpose of getting government into energy research in the first place was to fund those projects which have too long a "lead time" and require too much in capital investment for private firms to be able to task the risk.

In many of the short-term projects which do not require the massive machines characterizing LLL, there are today private firms all over the nation with adequate resources. Indeed, in many cases, the government finds it doesn't have to put up any money at all. Instead, it is offering loan guarantees and tax credits to researchers.

Schools' chief has offers

He said that any move would be "for a different kind of challenge."

Newlin was born in New Jersey but grew up in Glendale, Calif. He attended UCLA and for several years before moving into administration, pitched in the New York Yankees organization.

An intramural football injury at UCLA curtailed his professional baseball career.

Newlin succeeded Rudy Gatti, who resigned late in the school year 3½ years ago to accept the superintendency of the large Santa Clara Unified School District.

However, Newlin said he was not committed to any move.

He said neither board was scheduled to address the subject of any impending resignation.

Pleasanton trustees see state aid drop

PLEASANTON — Pleasanton Joint School District officials have projected a student enrollment decline of 960 and loss of ADA monies of $1.5 million by the fall of 1980.

As a result of the dire projections, a broad based parent - teacher - administrator study committee has been recommended by Supt. Bruce Newlin.

ADA stands for Average Daily Attendance. The state gives public school districts funds based on the number of students enrolled.

In stating the projections worked up by Dr. David Carlisle, director of research and development, business services chief Doug Rose said the district will probably have to consider employee layoff procedures as detailed in the Education Code. The district projects, based on the anticipated enrollments of the next three years, laying off 30 or more certificated staff members.

Rose's report came in conjunction with anticipated AB-65 monies for the next three years. The projected decline could result in a drop of $200,000 in AB-65 funds, even though an enrollment decline factor has been built in.

Carlisle's figures indicated the biggest enrollment declines will come at Valley View (a drop of 240 students), Walnut Grove (228) and Harvest Park (200).

In other business, Pleasanton trustees received a by-school breakdown of test scores, based on tests given to second, third and sixth graders last year.

The scores of sixth graders (1976-77) improved in reading and written expression.

Red Cross to help during 26-mile run

The American Red Cross will be doing its part at Livermore's fourth annual running of the 26-mile Marathon, Saturday, Dec. 10 — an event which Livermore Jaycees say is the largest marathon in the West.

The Marathon will begin at 10 a.m. at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory.

The race, sponsored by the Livermore Jaycees and the Livermore Valley Running Club, will bring out more than 1000 running men, women and kids for the grueling course, according to Pat Talty, Jaycee president.

The run should take about two and a half hours to do for more experience runners.

The 26-mile loop course will begin at the Lab, then continue by back roads to Pleasanton. The return trip will be via Stanley Boulevard.

Dell Lindstrom, Emergency Aid Station Coordinator for the South Alameda County Red Cross, says that emergency aid units will be staffed by registered nurses, just in case the runners may need help.

Trained volunteers will assist the nurses, and units will be linked by radio, transmitting over the Red Cross frequency. In the event an ambulance is needed, Lindstrom's wife, Connie, will be monitoring radio calls at home, prepared to telephone for that service.

Lindstrom explained that the Jaycees, Livermore Valley Running Club members and radio amateurs will be on hand to look for runners in difficulty. Radio amateurs will contact the Red Cross to send mobile units to the scene.

All Emergency Aid Unit staffers are trained in cardiopulmonary resuscitation, Lindstrom added.

In past years, Lindstrom said, typical cases in which runners needed assistance involved falls, cuts and abrasions, muscle and ligament strains and heat exhaustion.

Last year, some runners were 60 years of age or older, and there were high school entrants as well, Lindstrom said. Some of the competitors were training for the Olympic trials.

Talty said if past marathons are any indication, there will be plenty of spectators lining the Pleasanton-Livermore route.

Food drive for Fido?

Would you believe a food drive for Fido?

Yes, students at Mendenhall School in Livermore are putting a new twist on the holiday spirit, by collecting cans and bags of dog food for a good cause.

The donated food won't go to needy puppies — but it will save the animal shelter some money, according to Mendenhall teacher Michelle Wilson.

Wilson said the collecting is being done by a school organization called HELP (Help Every Little Pet). "Last year, over 1000 pounds of food was collected," she said, and the students are hoping to collect just as much this year.

The group is collecting donations of dry or canned dog food, Wilson said, for the purpose of donating it to the animal shelter.

"The money they can save on food there," she said, might mean that a few of the little puppies there might get a greater chance to find an owner. The pound will keep an animal "as long as they have food and a cage for it," said Wilson — so hopefully, the donations will help lengthen that period.

But, the class is also putting together additional projects to raise some money for HELP. With the money from other fund-raising activities, Nilson said, Mendenhall students and staff will spay and neuter their own pets.

With the money raised from bake sales and a bike-a-thon, for example the Mendenhall kids spayed some 40 pets.

As soon as the kids collect food for this Christmas HELP project, Wilson added, they'll be wrapping it in Christmas paper and taking it down to the shelter.

Area residents who might have some extra dog food, or who wish to donate to HELP, can call Mendenhall School, 1701 El Padro Drive, Livermore, at 447-7181. Donations can be picked up by HELP members if necessary

Love in a can— food drives for needy

Christmas dinner — to many it is the biggest, most eagerly anticipated meal of the year. And thanks to the efforts of volunteers in the Valley, it will be a happy celebration for area families who find themselves hit by hard times this holiday season.

The Emergency Fund Center in Livermore, the Pleasanton Community Christmas Fund and Children's Emergency Council in Dublin are already at work to provide families in need with a traditional Christmas dinner, as well as gifts for the youngsters.

Each program differs slightly from the others, but the process is primarily the same.

Months ago, letters were sent to businesses and civic groups requesting donations. Schools were contacted to arrange a canned food drive and volunteers were rounded up to collect, transport and assemble the food baskets.

Everyone, according to the programs' chairwomen, came through with flying colors. In acutal to age, school's provide enormous amounts of canned goods. Last year, Granada High School and Sonoma Avenue School each collected enough to fill two and one-half pick-up trucks, said Jolene Abrahams, chairwoman of the Livermore project.

Canned vegetables, fruits, soups and juices are the most common donations, but there have been some unusual canned goods received.

Caviar and three one-gallon tins of marinated artichoke hearts donated last year to the Pleasanton Community Christmas Fund, said Marcelline Mahern of the Pleasanton Junior Women's Club who, along with the Pleasanton Jaycee Wives, are coordinating the fund.

The Dublin group found themselves with canned sardines and a lot of olives. But, usually, said Joy Milliken, most people realize hungry people are not going to make it on olives, so they donate vegetables and fruit.

Occasionally, said Abrahams, the Emergency Center will receive donations of a complete meal. "You can tell that someone has acctually shopped for a entire Christmas meal, lacking the turkey. We find green beans, yams and pudding all in one paper bag. I guess they figure it only costs a couple of dollars, and they are feeding someone for Christmas."

Homemade food cannot be accepted, said Abrahams, because it is against county health rules.

But, toys and small gifts are certainly welcomed. The Livermore Christmas Basket project will accept used toys in good shape. "New crayons, coloring books and puzzles make super good gifts, and story books don't cost a heck of a lot," said Abrahams.

In Pleasanton, the gift end of the basket is being handled by the Pleasanton Jaycee Wives. Gift trees, with tags indicating the age and sex of a child, have been placed at the Bank of America, First National Bank and Sprouse Reitz. Individuals interested in helping, can pull a tag, and buy a new toy appropriate for the child on the tag. Last year, according to Mahern, all the gifts needed were donated from the gift trees.

Money collected by each group is used to buy meat certificates and fresh produce and dairy products.

In Livermore, the Livermore-Dublin Disposal Co. will pick up boxes of canned goods and toys marked "Christmas Fund" or "Emergency Center" on normal pick-up days and set them aside for the program, explained Abrahams. In Livermore last year, 350 families received a food basket, The Community Christmas Fund in Pleasanton helped 56 families, and 50 families in Dublin got food and gifts for Christmas.

The Children's Emergency Council is a year-round operation staffed entirely by volunteers. Milliken said many of those helped at Christmas, are lent a hand all year.

In fact, she said, enough canned goods are collected during the school canned food drives, to keep a good assortment at the center for the next 12 months.

There are those families, though which need help especially at this time of year because "we do have a lot of lay-offs and unemployment that hits in the fall and winter," explained Milliken.

The Livermore program helps about 20 seniors each year. This year it got a request from an elderly woman whose two grandchildren were coming by bus to visit her for the holidays. With the help of a Christmas basket, she will be able to serve her grandchildren a full-course Chrismas meal, said Abrahams.

For more information about the Emergency Fund Center's Christmas Basket Project in Livermore, call Jolene Abrahams at 447-9386, or co-chairwoman Elena Drummond at 455-4715.

To help in Pleasanton, call Marcelline Mahern at 846-7164. The Dublin program, run by the Children's Emergency Council, can be contacted through its 24-hour answering service at 828-5363.

To find out how you can help, call the bureau at 462-3570, or stop by its office at 519 Kottinger Drive, Pleasanton. Office hours are 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays.

AMONG CURRENT NEEDS

- Volunteer is needed to do typing for a local heritage foundation.
- Persons are needed to assist the city in developing an inventory of property to be auctioned at a later date.
- An arts and crafts assistant is needed for seniors in a hospital center.
- An assistant is needed in a physical fitness class for convalescing patients.
- Volunteers are needed to assist in a high school career center starting in January.

The rush is on!

They were supposed to be shopping for presents, but these three Fallon Elementary School kids — Robert Horn, Marjorie Foster and Karen McClintock — took some time out at a recent school bazaar to look over a tempting coloring book. The kids got a chance to check out possible presents for the family, and found out that the shopping rush is really going strong.

'Dial Santa' phone to open for kids

Local youngsters can plan on a phone chat with Santa Claus beginning Dec. 12, through a program sponsored by Livermore Area Recreation and Park area recreation departments.

Twelve special Valley lines will be opened up so that children may call in their requests and messages to Santa, starting from Monday through Thurday, Dec. 19 through 22. The number to call is 828-8920 between 6 and 7:30 p.m.

Santa's line, no doubt, will be busy — so warn the kids not to give up on the first try.

Area groups who will be assisting the busy Claus will be the Livermore Area Recreation and Park District, the Livermore Jaycees, the Pleasanton Department of Recreation and the Dublin-San Ramon Services District.

Business women meet

Pleasanton Business and Professional Women will meet for its annual Christmas party Wednesday, Dec. 14 at 6:30 p.m. in Hap's Restaurant on Neal Street, Pleasanton.

Cocktails will begin at 6:30 and dinner will start at 7:3M p.m. An exchange of Christmas gifts will be included in the event. For reservations, call Del Vance at 447-5539.

Alternatives in childbirth

SAN RAMON — Two films designed to familiarize the public with alternatives to common labor experiences in childbirth will be shown Dec. 16 at the Family Medical Center at 9260 Alcosta Blvd.

"Becoming," a Lamaze childbirth film, and "The Amazing Newborn," dealing with the abilities and needs of a newborn child, will be presented by the American Society for Psychoprophylaxis in Obstetrics.

Support for Buenas Vidas

DUBLIN — Buenas Vida Ranch in Livermore was granted a letter of endorsement from the Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) supporting the operation of Buenas Vidas programs.

During a DSRSD board meeting, directors agreed to write the letter requested by Boyd Shattuck, director of Buenas Vidas Ranch.

The ranch is dedicated to helping abused and neglected children. It is located at 5301 Arroyo Road in Livermore.

Shattuck stated in his letter of request to DSRSD, "In order to receive full consideration from various funding sources, it is necessary that we demonstrate through letters of endorsement the support of the community."

He added additional funds were needed to make capital improvements on the publicly owned ranch site.

"In addition to this quest, we have been busy developing an additional area of service to the community with abused and neglected children," Shattuck continued. — by Sue Vogelsanger

Human need survey

PLEASANTON — Field work on the city's human needs survey is finished, but it will take at least until January to compile all the data and write a report.

The research took several months, writes staff member John Carpenter in a report to the Human Services Commission being presented tonight. Staff of all valley service organizations were interviewed to determine what theY think are the major needs local residents face. And 280 persons in town were asked, in a random survey, what they see as the major social problem here.

All this work culminates in a new edition of the Pleasanton Directory of Human Services, expected to be released this spring. The directory will provide information on over 140 agencies serving residents in town.

Moreover, human services staff will deliver a formal report to city council, tellinp elected officials where lies the most important unmet needs.

Legislature and the elderly

A summary of bills affecting elderly persons has been compiled by the California Rural Legal Assistance Program and the California Commission on Aging.

The summary was given in The Heritage newsletter published by the Alameda County Department on Aging in Oakland.

Some employment bills which have become law include AB 568 and AB 586 (Alatorre) which abolish mandatory retirement in public and private employment are now Chapter 852. They were effective Sept. 16, 1977 in public employment and Chapter 851. In private employment they will be effective Jan. 1, 1978. The Fair Employment Practices Commission is in charge of enforcement.

AB 803 (Brown) Adds age to the discrimination policy.

AB 138 (Hughes) CRLA supports. This establishes a displaced homemaker service center in Los Angeles, Chapter 754, effective Jan.1, 1978.

However, unfortunately, generally in California the poorest displaced homemakers have still only the county general relief programs and charity to turn to for help. County eligibility standards vary capriciously. Grants average $90 per month with Los Angeles having the highest grant of $175 monthly. In Los Angeles, 30 per cent of the general relief recipients are women 50 years and older. Many of that group are displaced homemakers.

SB 825 (Smith) is supported by California Rural Legal Assistance (CRLA). This extends funding for Alameda Displaced Homemakers Project for one year. The chapter / number is 755; effective Jan. 1, 1978.

SJR 8 (Smith). This is a request to Congress to establish displaced homemaker centers throughout the United States.

AB 829 (Chel). This bill allows a retired teacher to change his/her beneficiary after retirement instead of only before in cases where a dissolution or nullity of marriage has been entered. The chapter is 619; effective Jan. 1, 1978.

In the category of Health, AB 180 (Hughes) provides for statewide high blood pressure screening.

AB 1610 (Chel). Under existing law the Department of Health can pay up to 50 per cent of county costs for programs allowing public health nurses to visit senior citizen housing and centers to provide medical consultation. AB1610 extends such payment to cities which establish similar programs. The chapter number was 211; effective June 30, 1977.

AB 1611 (Chel) is supported by CRLA. This bill establishes adult day health care as a Medi-Cal program. It also sets up licensing provisions and creates guidelines for operating health care centers. Also, AB 1611 provides $1 million for matching federal funds for adult day health services by transferring $1 million from Item 241.3 to Item 248 (Medi-Cal) of the Budget Act. The chapter is 1066; effective Sept. 24, 1977.

AB 612 (Chel) appropriates $100,000 (out of Item 241.3 of the Budget Act) to the Department of Health. The money is to be used as matching funds to community organizations to enable them to establish adult day health centers. (Chapter 1065; effective Sept. 24, 1977.)

AB 998 (McCarthy). At the present time many services directed toward senior citizens are provided through the Older Americans Act (Title III, Vii). Also, under the Federal ACTION program a variety of volunteer programs are provided. Lastly, medical and social services are provided to some seniors under Title XX and XIX of the Social Security Act.

AB 998 requires the Health and Welfare Agency to develop model projects for the provision of multi-purpose senior services which integrate the above services.

Patty's purse

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst has reported to police that her purse was stolen from her bodyguard's van while it was parked overnight near his Pacifica home.

Police said Miss Hearst and bodyguard Bernard Shaw came to the station Nov. 29 — the day after the theft of the purse containing more than $400 cash and keys to her San Francisco apartment and her family's home.

Shaw, 30, a San Francisco police officer assigned to guard Miss Hearst, reported he parked his van with the purse inside near his home at one a.m. on Nov. 28. He said when he returned at 11 a.m. the next day the purse was gone.

Pacifica Police Chief Mel Nelson said Miss Hearst asked that the report of the incident be withheld from the press, but he decided to release the information, anyway.

Second park workshop tonight for Dublin, SR

DUBLIN — Residents of Dublin and San Ramon will have another chance to help shape future park and recreation services for their community tonight at 7:30 in Shannon Community Center.

The Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) is sponsoring this second workshop, according to Waide Egener. He is Parks Facilities Coordinator for DSRSD.

The first workshop was held in mid-October. The small, informal discussion group format utilized at the first workshop will be used tonight.

The purpose of the workshops is to get public input that will be used to implement DSRSD's 10-year masterplan for parks and recreation.

Tonight, preliminary recommendations of Jack Buktenica and Associates will be reviewed. These recommendations are expected to be the main subject of discussion. Buktenica and Associates are consultants to the district for preparation of the masterplan.

Workshop participants will also hear a report on the results of a telephone survey of the community undertaken as part of the planning program.

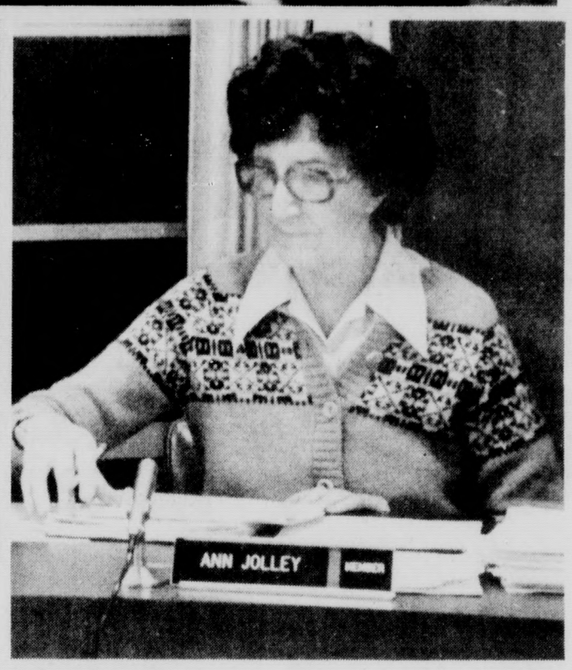
Another report will be given on related parks and recreation plans for the area between San Ramon and Danville which is being developed by County Recreation District R-7.

The masterplan is to go before the district board in January for adoption. It will serve as a primary guide for recreational decisions for the next ten years.

The masterplan being prepared for the district embraces all facets of park facilities development and recreational services programming. This includes projected revenues and costs, maintenance and management functions, new park site acquisitions, recreation program needs given anticipated population increases and age characteristics of the community plus a projection of the need for new facilities as measured against expected demand for recreational services.

After this second workshop, the plan enters its final phase of development.

Egener stated the district is anxious to have as much response from the public as possible before final recommendations are developed.



New regime

Richard Fahey, top left, newly elected president of the Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) board of directors, accepts the gavel from former board president Charles Ladner. Joseph Covello, bottom left, attended his first DSRSD board meeting as a newly elected director. Ann Jolley, bottom right, was elected vice-president. Covello's position was won during the district's first-ever mailed ballot ti eeFhe iJe election held Sept. 6. The executive election boosting Fahey and Jolley to their new positions was held Tuesday during a regular board session. Fahey was formerly vice-president.

Chamber's newest leaders

DUBLIN — Dublin Chamber of Commerce directors cast their ballots for a new slate of executives.

Winners of the top slots were Mary Stewart, president; Tom Driver, vice-president; Dennis Kahler, secretary and Ron Pacheco, treasurer.

The election was held this week at Dublin Corral during a regular board meeting.

Stewart is Branch Manager for Diablo Personnel Agency, Driver is an attorney at law, Kahler owns The Import Shop. Pacheco owns Swensens Ice Cream Parlor in San Ramon. All of them have served as chamber directors.

Pleasanton pares plans to control new growth

PLEASANTON — The long list of alternative ways to manage future growth in town was cut Tuesday night when city council selected three compromise plans for further study, leaving open the option of returning to any of the four discarded plans later.

In the second of four scheduled workshops, council members leaned towards the compromises in hopes of offsetting suits they expect from developers who are claiming a 1972 settlement agreement gives them first right to all new sewer connections.

City attorney Ken Scheidig told members he believes the city can win those suits under any of the three compromises.

One plan previously supported by mayor Bob Philcox leaves the northern part of Pleasanton involved in the '72 agreement out of the residential allocation program, allowing that area to develop at a 2 percent growth rate each year.

The other two plans keep both the northern and southern sections of town separately under the program. One would rank contruction projects under a points system indicating which would be of most value to town, then city officials would allocate sewer connections. The other would allocate connections to each area, then rank the projects.

Question on 160-acres

By David Hoffman
Time's Washington Bureau

A top Interior Department official has questioned the "scholarship" and "integrity" of the prestigious Congressional Research Service following publication of a study on the department's plan to brpak up large California farms receiving federal irrigation.

The 45-page study suggested that Interior officials are moving "too fast" in attempting to enforce the 160-acre limitation in the San Joaquin and Imperial Valleys.

"I was aghast after reading it," said Daniel P. Beard, deputy assistant secretary of Interior, in a highly-critical memo to CRS obtained by The Time's Washington Bureau.

"What has happened to ... scholarship and impartial inquiry at CRS?" questioned Beard, a former CRS environmental analyst who is now responsible for defending Interior's controversial land reform pffort.

"I think it presents a balanced viewpoint. We're not coming for or against the 160-acre limitation," responded Malcom Simmons, who authorized the report with CRS analyst Ken Cook.

The controversy over the study got started a few weeks ago when opponents of the Interior Department's plan — testifying at a hearing — cited the CRS study as evidence that the 160-acre limit is outdated for modern farming operations.

These claims have apparently carried some weight on Capitol Hill. CRS is a well-respected organization, preparing studies exclusively for congressmen and their committees. As a branch of the Library of Congress, CRS has more than 800 employes and an annual budget of $16 million.

The CRS analysts refused to identify who asked for their study, but other sources said it was the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Without making recommendations, the study reviewed the efficiency and economic viability of small vs. large farms. The report also observed that the "most serious" social impact of the Interior plan "is that the federal government is not only stepping too heavily into a regional issue, but stepping too fast as well."

The study was commissioned in the wake of an announcement Aug. 25 that the Interior Department would enforce the 160-acre limitation for the first time in 75 years. Under regulations proposed by Interior, corporate farms must sell their excess lands in a lottery. Each member of a family of four would be eligible to purchase up to 160 acres.

The regulations, which attempt to encourage family farming on federally-irrigated lands under the 1902 Reclamation Act, have comp under heavy attack from growers in the San Joaquin and Impprial Valleys, where the new rules would have the greatest impact.

The CRS report came to light as both sides were gearing up for a major battle in Congress early next year over the 160-acre limit and other aspects of reclamation law.

Beard, the Interior official who once worked for CRS, claimed in his sharply-ciritcal memo to his former boss at the agency that there were key ommissions and misinterpretations in the study.

In addition, Rep. George Miller, D-Martinez — who has defended the Interior plan to enforce the 160-acre limit — also criticized the CRS study and asked for a "clarification."

Beard charged that the researchers "did not even discuss" the "substantial federal subsidy" involved in federal irrigation for large corporate growers. "To ignore subsidies is to ignore the entire purpos of the reclamation program," Beard said.

Beard also charged that the CRS analysts focused on only the controversial Westlands Water District near Fresno, rather than the rest of California and other states affected by the 160-acre limit.

White House's loose language

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter sometimes corrects grammar and spelling in memoes submitted by underlings. Maybe he should turn his attention to their speech texts.

The office of Robert Lipshutz, White House counsel, once handed reporters a text in which Lipshutz reported that leaders of the developing nations are busy "irradicating illeracy." That's not a typographical error, or errors. At least, not here.

Lipshutz also was quoted as using the following ungrammatical phrase: "out of respect of the inherent dignity and man and woman."

Dr. Peter Bourne, the president's special assistant for health issues, is a learned man. But someone, presumably a speech writer, recently had him spelling minuscule as miniscule.

During the campaign, Carter himself earned a reputation for precise use of words. He is not infallible, of course.

For example, Carter likes to talk about the "enormity" of the energy problem. The preferred definitions of the word in Webster's New World Dictionary are "great wickedness" and "a monstrous or outrageous act; very wicked crime."

Carter presumably uses the word as a reference to "enormous size or extent; vastness." But the dictionary says this is "generally considered a loose usage."

In the first months of the Carter administration, foreign policy adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski kept himself so far out of the public eye that he was rumored to be reluctant to appear on television talk shows or otherwise make bids for personal publicity.

More recently, the president's Polish-born assistant for national security affairs has appeared on ABC's "Issues and Answers" and held a series of briefings for White House reporters, two of them on the record. He has not appeared a bit bashful.

That brings to mind former President Nixon's German-born assistant for national security affairs. Henry A. Kissinger also stayed in the background as a White House newcomer, but not for long. Should Brzezinski decide to "go public" on a grander scale, he can call on staff advisers experienced in the realm of journalism and public relations.

For the first time, Brzezinski and the National Security Council staff he heads have their own professional spokesman. He is Jerrold Schecter, former diplomatic editor of Time magazine, whose title is associate press secretary.

In addition, Brzezinski recently borrowed Fred Shaver, former U.S. Embassy spokesman in Venezuela, from the U.S. Information Agency. Shaver is expected to return to USIA soon, and it is not yet clear whether he will be replaced.

But Shaver's presence, however brief, has heightened speculation that Brzezinski will prove to be no shrinking violet.

Past administrations relied on career foreign service officers to speak for the NSC. One of them, Richard Moose, has gone on to serve as assistant secretary of state for African affairs.

Choosing cities for federal aid

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Harris, secretary of housing and urban development, says the decision on which American cities will be eligible for special federal aid will be a "most unromantic process," handled by computer.

She said Wednesday that if the President and Congress adopt a national urban strategy emphasizing aid to distressed cities, officials will "crank into the computer" a number of characteristics that indicate urban decline.

She said such characteristics could include a declining tax base, a declining population and age of housing stock. Higher-than-average unemployment could be another focal point.

"It is the most unromantic process in which we will be engaged," she said. An urban policy tilted toward the distressed cities in now under consideration at the White House, supported by a Cabinet-level task force.

In a speech to the 1977 Congress of Cities, Secretary Harris urged officials from healthy cities to support the administration's decision to target new federal aid to hardship cities.

40,000 new JFK pages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opening its files on the murder of John F. Kennedy, the FBI is releasing 40,001 pages rich in details about the search for the man who slew a president and the motive that led him to it.

The initial scrutiny of the material being released today may produce more questions than answers about what happened in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963, and the mysteries still lingering from it. There is more to come. The FBI will release another 40,000 pages next month. In the two batches, officials say, will be all the paperwork generated in the bureau as it probed the case.

No files are being withheld, officials say, although many words and paragraphs have been deleted because they are classified as secret or are otherwise exempt from disclosure.

The agency is releasing the material to comply with requests under the Freedom of Information Act. Agents have spent about 18 months screening the files to delete the classified and exempt portions.

When the screening process was complete, agency employees began making copies and packing them in cartons. Each set comes in 15 cartons that weigh about 60 pounds apiece.

By dawn, sets were stacked at the loading dock of the FBI's J. Edgar Hoover Building for delivery to the news organizations receiving them. Several organizations, including the Associated Press, are paying the 10-cents-a-page copying fee the FBI charges for the material — a total of $4,000.10.

But the law allows an agency to waive the fee if the disclosure of the material is considered to be of great public importance. So the fees may yet be appealed by the news organizations to the Justice Department, which has authority to overrule the FBI if it finds that the disclosure is sufficiently important to the public.

Boatwright faces charge

BY PAT KEEBLE
Lesher News Bureau

MARTINEZ--Assemblyman Dan Boatwright, D-Concord, in the latest exchange of charges with community watchdog group Community Cause, has been charged with violations of state financial disclosure laws.

Community Cause chairman William O. Smith Tuesday released copies of letters he has written to Attorney General Evelle Younger and to the Fair Political Practices Commission alleging Boatwright failed to disclose ownership of shares in Countrywood Associates, owners of Countrywood Shopping Center in Ygnacio Valley.

The charges, latest in a series made by Smith and Community Cause attorney Stephan Williams, have been aired previously and denied by Boatwright, but have not been investigated by a government agency.

Smith said the complaint was not filed with District Attorney William O'Malley "because we believe a conflict exists which might affect the vigorous prosecution of these charges" by O'Malley's office.

In addition to failing to disclose his interest in Countrywood, Smith alleges Boatwright illegally attempted to use his influence to lobby state banking authorities into denying permission for a bank to locate in the shopping center.

The allegations state Community Cause is informed that Boatwright owned shares in Countrywood as early in November or December of 1973, but failed to disclose that fact on financial disclosure statements filed in 1974, 1975 and early 1976.

Boatwright did disclose in his statement of Dec. 16, 1976, that he had exercised an option to buy two shares for $24,000 from Joseph Ancona, his long time friend and campaign treasurer and one of the developers of the shopping center.

Boatwright said at the time he had purchased an option to buy the share in June 1976. Options do not have to be disclosed.

He acknowledged at the time that the shares were worth over $100,000.

Smith said in his letter to Younger that the actual worth is believed by Community Cause to exceed $300,000.

Boatwright was accused in a lawsuit brought against Countrywood in October 1976 by Brokers Realty of using his influence as a powerful assemblyman to keep the state from approving location of West Coast Federal Savings and Loan and Chartered Bank of London in the center.

The suit alleged Countrywood Associates refused to pay commissions to Brokers Realty for getting the two firms for the center.

It was subsequently settled out of court, with no public disclosure of the terms of the settlement. The issue of Boatwright's influence was not considered.

Boatwright, who was not available for comment Tuesday, stated at the time that suit was filed that all his economic statements had been truthful, and pointed out they were filed under penalty of perjury.

"In the future, I intend to continue to file economic statements under penalty of perjury and if I should acquire interest in any business or any land, it will certainly be revealed," Boatwright said at that time.

Although the charges have been a matter of public comment for over a year, a spokesman for the FPPC said Tuesday no formal complain has ever been made to that agency and no formal investigation has been made by it.

The Community Cause complaint is a formal complaint, signed by Smith and with a declaration that, "under the penalty of perjury, the foregoing statements are true and correct to the best of my knowledge."

The hassles between Boatwright and Williams and Smith go back to Boatwright's Concord City Council days.

Boatwright late last year won investigation by O'Malley of Community Cause's status as a political campaign group, resulting in charges still pending that the group failed to file disclosure statements.

Community Cause was responsible for civil charges on violation of disclosure laws against former county supervisors Al Dias of El Sobrante and James Moriarty of Lafayette. Dias has been fined $1,000 for various violations, while the case against Moriarty is still pending.

Aid for farmers

Lesher News Bureau

CONCORD—The 1978 Agricultural Conservation program for Contra Costa has $43,000 to help farmers solve some of their soil and erosion problems.

Gerald Haet, executive director of the county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee, announced recently that the program would concentrate on four high priority conservation problems that area farmers currently face.

These include:

— Sediment from farmland going into the air and streams.

— Water conservation and management.

— Inadequate drainage facilities.

— The accumulation of salts in the soil brought on mainly by drought conditions.

Requests for aid on these problems will be eccepted from Dec. 12 through Dec. 30. All projects will be only partially funded--with the government picking up 50 to 80 per cent of the tab depending on the type of project approved.

All requests should be sent to the Contra Costa-Alameda County ASCS Office, 5554 Clayton Road, Concord, Calif. 94521.

Victory for parks

Lesher News Bureau

OAKLAND--East Bay Regional Parks directors won out over a private developer's higher bid in buying land for two key Contra Costa regional trails Tuesday.

Directors approved purchases of just over 118 acres worth $387,000, and indicated their intent to acquire another 520 acres.

Landowner Ken Brown will receive $350,000 for a 116-acre parcel off Pleasant Hill, below Springhill Road, in Lafayette. Brown told the board he had a higher offer from a home developer, but he wanted the land to go to the park district.

Two key trails from Briones Regional Park must pass through the land to connect with Mt. Diablo State Park and Las Trampas Wilderness Park.

Both trails are described as key elements of the park district's regional trail system, according to land chief Hulet Hormbeck.

It's not the view from Olympus, but Times photographer Michael Macor captured the layered look of fog over Contra Costa County hillsides this week at his vantage point atop Mt. Diablo.

Minimum farm plan in county is knocked

MARTINE — A proposal to prevent East County farm lands from being subdivided into less than five and 10-acre parcels came in for harsh criticism Tuesday.

These minimum acreage requirements are part of the proposed East County General Plan which got its first airing Tuesday before the Board of Supervisors.

Those giving testimony called the proposal either overly restrictive or too weak.

The five and 10-acre requirements were written into the plan to preserve the area's strong agricultural economy as long as economically possible. The planning area contains about 40 percent of the county's total agricultural property.

The 10-acre minimum would apply to about 14,000 acres of prime agricultural land in the Brentwood-Bryon area designated as the agricultural core.

The five-acre requirement applies to 54,600 acres of less valuable farming area and would be zoned agriculturalresidential.

Those who felt the requirements were too restrictive said it would prevent them from making an adequate profit if and when they decided to sell the property.

They said potential developers would be less inclined to buy large blocks of property that could not be further subdivided without first going through long, involved procedures with the county planning department.

New find with aspirin

BOSTON (AP) — Aspirin can protect male surgery patients — but not female ones — from forming blood clots in their veins, a common and sometimes fatal complication of hospital care, a new study shows.

Among men who underwent hip surgery, those who took four aspirin tablets a day had only a third as many cases of dislodged blood clots floating through their veins, the study said.

Such clots, common among surgery patients over 40, can be fatal if they become lodged in the lungs. About 47,000 people die from this in the United States each year.

"This is the first rigorous, scientific documentation that aspirin does provide protection against the development of blood clots in a high-risk group of patients," Dr. William H. Harris, who directed the study, said in an interview.

A report on the research, conducted at Massachusetts General Hospital, was published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

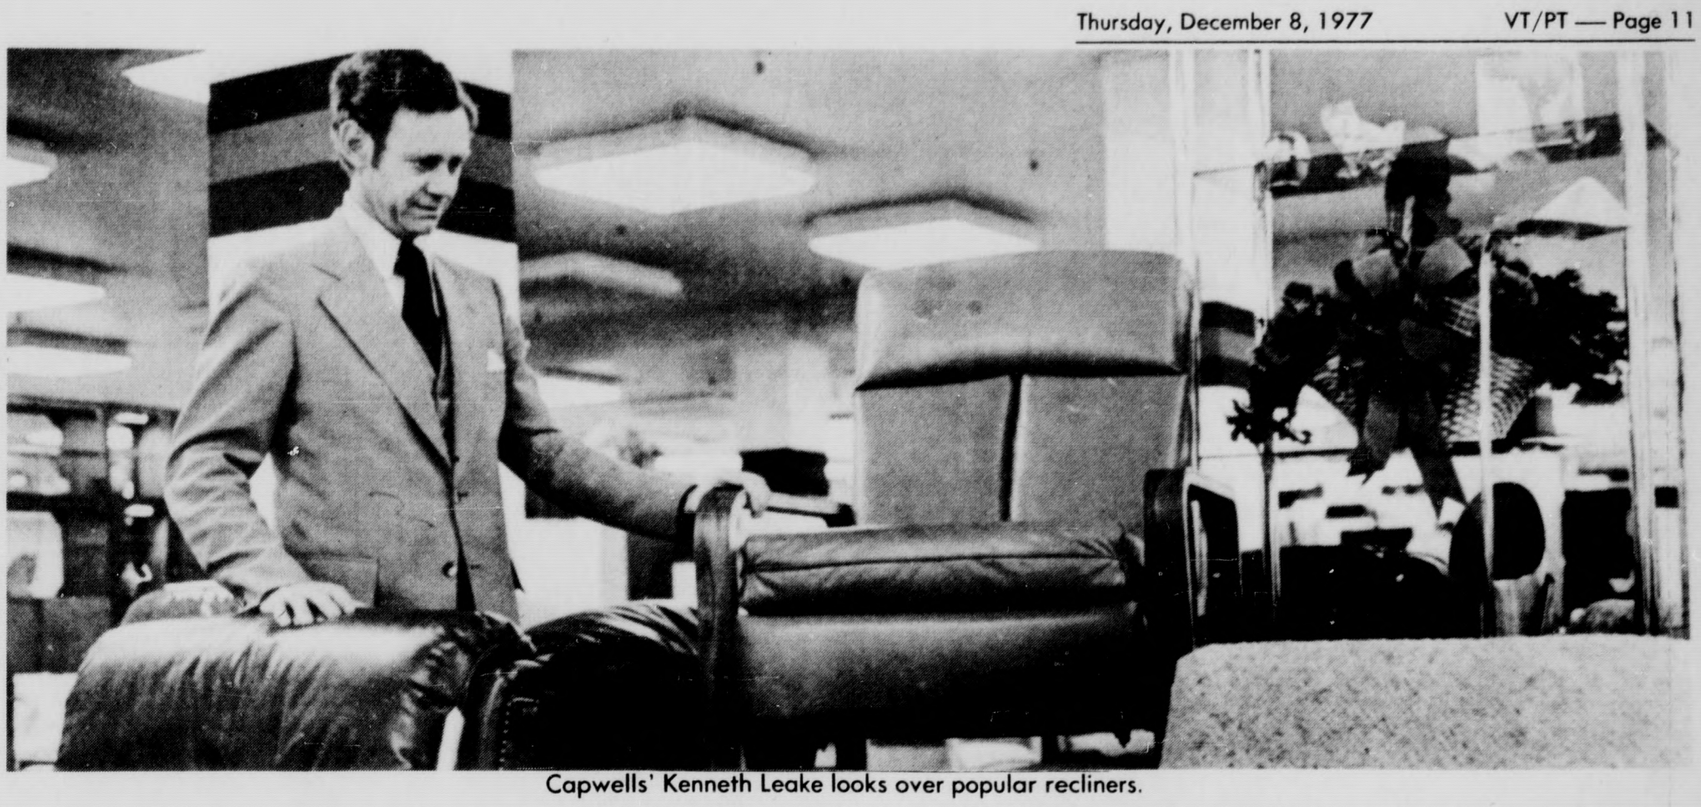
The National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute is conducting a study in 30 institutions around the nation to see if aspirin can prevent heart attacks by preventing formation of clots. The study involves 4,500 patients who have already had one heart attack.

In the Massachusetts study, four of 23 men receiving aspirin developed blood clots compared with 14 of 25 men who took inactive, substitute pills called placebos. All the men were over 40, and all had undergone surgery to have their hip joints replaced. However, the study showed that the aspirin treatment works only for men. Among women, the risk remained the same, whether or not they took aspirin. The doctors could not explain this difference. None of the patients who took part in the study died from blood clots. Ordinarily, about half the people who have hip surgery develop clots, and Harris said the odds of death from this are about one in 50.

Surgery patients are now sometimes given blood thinning agents to prevent clots, Harris said, but this medicine can also slow healing.

This makes aspirin an important new treatment, he said. "If you can get protection using an uncomplicated and relatively safe medicine that's quite cheap and easy to manage, it's a great advantage."

Harris said more studies are necessary to find out whether aspirin will prevent clots after other kinds of surgery and whether increased doses will provide even greater benefits.



Capwells' Kenneth Leake looks over popular recliners.

Trends change in shoppers' taste

Christmas shoppers are definetly tummy-and-games conscious this holiday season.

The "hot items" are products that will get such popular foods as burgers, pizza and donuts from the package to salivating lips and gums as quickly as possible!

All the while playing one of those outrageously popular television console games — which now have gone from the simple ping pong and ice hockey facsimiles to "playing" war games.

Kenneth Leake, home furnishings and apparel buying exec for Capwells, sums up the "motivation" for holiday buying when he opines, "Generally, there's a different life style today. People are buying things that make them feel good."

Leake has been with Capwells for 15 years and has seen some tremendous changes not only in the vitality and scope of the long-established Oakland Capwells, but merchandising trends overall.

He believes the key in retailing is "knowing who your customer is. We have to be merchandising sensors."

Leake, while noting that business volume in the Capwells chain, specifically the main Oakland store, has grown consistently, admits that the customer who shops I. Magnin, for example, won't necessarily ever come to Capwells for women's apparel.

But the store's strength, as with other "majors" like Wards and Sears, is in diversity with emphasis on furnishings and house wares.

The runaway best seller thus far this Christmas season is the food processor, especially the Cuisinart brand made in France.

Quality food processors, according to Leake, can do everything but tend your steaks and mix a good double martini.

Top of the line food processors can cost from $160 to $225, ranging down to the compact and efficient G.E. model at about $80.

Other house ware products that are getting strong play from gift buyers is the pizza baker made by Mirro.

Leake, who obviously has consumer-tested the product, remarks of the excellent consistency of the crust— "on a par with what you'd get at Shakey's."

The pizza baker, and a donut maker, both go for $19.99 and provide just the right number of portions. In other words, just enough for you and the kids.

If Aunt Lolly pops in, she'll have to make her own!

Also in the popular make-your-own section are the Salton yogurt and Waring ice cream-makers.

For the gourmet who demands a more substantial meal, microwave ovens are also "in" and a popular gift item ... possibly as reward to a long-suffering golf or TV football "widow."

When not tummy-conscious, buyers and browsers appear to be heads-over-heels enamored with video games.

The "sport" has now advanced to the point where leagues and tournaments are held. While the sets are not inexpensive, they do provide a certain test of manual dexterity.

And good 'ol manual never had it so good, seated in his or her front room, far from the madding crush of the tennis courts or golf links.

In the realm of men's apparel, Leake said the early sellers have been tone - on - tone dress shirts and super suede sport shirts.

Velour products, once considered the property of the jet set playboys, are now coveted by mister white collar, blue collar and no collar.

Traffic and sales volumes look promising at this point in the season, with two big weeks to go.

Then comes the "white sales" and "close outs."

It just might turn out to be a pretty good retail season.

Emergency over some very confusing rules

LIVERMORE — Bureaucratic redtape was started Monday by the city council to comply with a new state provision on public employes' retirement benefits.

Take a deep breath and follow the exact procedure if you can: the council had to adopt a resolution of intent to amend the employes' contracts that night, which they did.

They cannot adopt the ordinance amending the contract any sooner than 20 days after adopting the intent to amend resolution. But this new provision says the ordinance amending the contract must be done within the calendar year of 1977.

So the council has to meet the week after Christmas, since the 20 days will be up Christmas Day, and pass the resolution in a special emergency meeting. That creates problems for council members who will be in and out of town for the holidays.

All the redtape is that four employes can pay into an insurance pool with expanded survivors' benefits, at a cost of $2 per month to them, explained City Attorney Gary Reiners.

Tom Matthews

Housing head to attend area meets

LIVERMORE — Local residents will have a chance to get acquainted with the new Livermore Housing Authority director, Tom Matthews, in the next week as he shows up at various meetings.

Apparently launching his new position with a concerted effort to get in touch with the people, Matthews will meet the Leahy Square Tenants Association next Tuesday, 8 p.m., for the first time.

The following Thursday, Dec. 15, he will hold open forum with the Social Concerns Committee at its meeting, 7:30 p.m. at 5th Street School. And he will meet with the Livermore Housing Authority at its regular meeting on Dec. 20.

Industry plum for Livermore

LIVERMORE — Polymir Industries will be breaking ground later this month for its plant and administrative offices on the 13 acres of land on S. Front Road.

Construction comes after the city council this week approved the final subdivision map and an agreement to extend water service to the industrial land owned by Western Pacific.

Polymir negotiated the purchase of 13 acres of the 135-acre parcel and hopes to be in the new facilities by the spring. Their facilities currently are located in Oakland.

Plans call for a main building of 100,000 square feet to serve as the manufacturing plant for polyurethan insulation materials for both residential and industrial construction. A smaller 3,000 square foot building will be connected to serve as offices and two buildings each 12,000 square feet will be built for storage.

Community Development Director Emanual Gorland said Western Pacific will extend railroad trackis to the storage facilities for shipping.

Future plans, a few years from now, call for development of the second half of the 13 acres with another 100,000 square foot building.

The manufacturing plant is the largest one to locate here in 20 years. The move came about partly because of the city's reduction of front-end development fees earlier this fall.

Gorland said the Polymir construction motivated Western Pacific to further consider subdevelopment of the property. When the council approved the parcel plans for Polymir Western Pacific agreed to put in a 40 foot drive in the center and dedicate eight feet of land to the city for South Front widening as wpll as put in curbs and gutters.

Future development of the Western Pacific property will be subject to parcel plan approval by the council.

Motel's sign wins a reprieve

LIVERMORE — A 90-day delay was granted on the El Dorado Motel sign hearing because owner L.B. Patel has been called out of the country on a personal emergency.

The appeal originally was to be held on Dec. 12 before the city council after the planning commission earlier rejected his application .

The commission found the sign was a violation of the ordinance and could see no justification for giving a conditional use permit.

Originally Patel was asking for a 33 foot high sign with a total of 133 square feet. The ordinance allows a 25 foot high sign that is only 25 square feet.

At the time Patel's lawyer heatedly argued the smaller free-standing sign would be obstructed by existing foliage.

Planners can go so far

Valley Planning Commission Vice Chairman Juanita Burow had some concrete suggestions on ways to insure an impact on planning commission decisions, when she spoke to the San Ramon Homeowners Association last Thursday.

But when it came to addressing questions as to what the commission can do about the Valley's overcrowded schools and water crisis, Burow pleaded "no jurisdiction."

"We have to look at the planning aspects of a development — whether it is fair and good use of the land?" she told the group.

"We cannot force EBMUD to stop hook-ups," she said. She gave the po s sibility of a moratorium little real hope, describing in detail the lengthy and ardous process in trying to get such a ruling through.

"I suppose the school board could go to the courts and get an injunction," she noted.

"I think our biggest problem is the school situation," she continued, calling the condition an economic problem of the whole community and one that called for a joint effort of the developers, builders and school board.

"Those are the people whose jobs are at stake," she said. "There are answers out there if they got together."

Burow mad it clear that her comments were made as an individualand not as an official representative of the commission.

She told the association members that in order to have their views heard by the commission, it was imperative that a delegation be present at the commission meetings.

"They are impressed by numbers as well as logical, well planned presentations," she said.

In area business, the homeowners took a dim view of the density of homes proposed for the Castleton development west of San Ramon Valley Boulevard between Bollinger Canyon and Norris Cnayon Roads.

They decided to take no action on the proposal until they could get more information from the county on the intended density for that area.

Phil Kamarer, representing Citation Builders, told the homeowners association board that his company was seeking to rezone the agricultural parcel to P-1, which would allow four to seven dwellings per net acre.

"I think we have a reasonable proposal," he said.

"I can't see any reason for that many homes on that lot," Mike Wahlig responded. "What you are proposing is over eight per net acre. To build 71 homes in there seems like it is out for everything you can get."

In further business the board heard from a delegation from Twin Creeks which voiced concern over the lack of parks in their area. The problem looms larger now they explained, because of the possibility of year round schools in the area.

DSRSD stalls city study

DUBLIN — The Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) backed out of doing a study on the feasibility of incorporating Dublin until better lines of communication can be established between it between them and two other groups involved in the project.

The other two groups are Citizens for Dublin Cityhood (CDC) and the Dublin Chamber of Commerce.

DSRSD directors called a halt to study proceedings during a regular board session. The hitch came when DSRSD directors realized a $1000 worth of funding budgeted by the Alameda Countyboard of supervisors to cover study costs had also been requested by a chamber steering committee to go into their pocket for the same study.

Originally, the $1000 was to go to the chamber. Then chamber directors decided it was unwise for them to become officially involved in the incorporation issue. They suggested a neutral citizens group be formed to pursue the issue's pros and cons.

Dave Burton volunteered to head the citizens committee. At that time he was chamber vice-president. Later, he and chamber directors made it clear he was not representing the chamber when acting as chairman of the citizens committee (later named Citizens for Dublin Cityhood). CDC was formed March 21 at Shannon Community Center.

Five separate committees made up CDC. They studied various aspects of incorporation such as budget, planning, etc.

Chamber directors agreed to let CDC use the $1000 for the feasibility study. The county nixed that plan.

County representatives said a public agency would have to administer the funds. Since the chamber was no longer officially involved, Burton asked DSRSD directors to act as the conduit for the $1000. The directors agreed.

DSRSD directors also agreed to delve into pros and cons of Dublin's proposed incorporation since incorporation would have an impact on the district.

DSRSD legal counsel and Roland Mayne were consulted. Mayne is Principal Administrative Analyst for Alameda County. Mayne contended $1000 would be a drop in the bucket for doing even a preliminary study. He said eight to ten thousand would be more like it.

Burton pointed out a volunteer, Beverly Lane, would do the study for $750. She later raised the fee to $1000. Lane is a veteran of the incorporation battle fought and lost in Danville Alamo and San Ramon last year. She is doing a master thesis on incorporation.

Burton said CDC was only interested in presenting a report with basic facts on incorporation. CDC's five committees researched other areas that had either thought of becoming incorporated or had become incorporated.

He presented these facts to the chamber. Chamber directors were not convinced of the validity of these findings.

Chamber directors finally agreed to take an opinion poll among the chamber's 245 members to see if members thought the chamber should become officially involved in the incorporation study.

The vote came back three to one in favor of chamber involvement.

Chamber directors agreed to form a volunteer steering committee utilizing directors, members and citizens to head the proceedings.

One of the first things they did was write a letter to the Alameda County Board of Supervisors requesting the $1000.

Meanwhile, DSRSD General Manager Paul Ryan and Mayne conferred about the incorporation issue. They came up with a proposed program for obtaining information about the subject.

Their first proposed course was to form an eight to ten member committee to advise, recommend and interpret regarding incorporation.

As this point and further ones were being discussed during DSRSD's regular board session this week, it became clear too many cooks could spoil the incorporation broth; especially where the $1000 was concerned.

Burton said, "We are going to become involved in a bureaucratic boondoggle if we aren't careful."

He added CDC's original intent was to study the feasibility of incorporating Dublin, try to get an election arranged for Dublin voters to decide the issue and have DSRSD act as legal channel for administering the $1000.

At this point, DSRSD directors agreed it might be wise to hold up proceedings until some of the confusion could be cleared.

Twin Valley District has new scout leader

David W. Bone, who has held several leadership positions with the Boy Scouts of America, has been appointed District Executive for the Twin Valley District.

The district covers Livermore, Pleasanton and Dublin.

Bone assumed his duties December 1.

Bone, a native of Iowa, has acted as assistant Cubmaster, Explorer Advisor, Commisioner and Scoutmaster with the organization.

He has also acted as camp program director during the summer, and is an Eagle Scout himself.

He and his wife, Bea, will be moving to the Valley this month. The position is Bone's first as a professional scouter with the organization.

Black celebrities' money rumored in A's sale plan

OAKLAND — Alameda County supervisors agreed this week to cooperate with the Oakland - Alameda County Coliseum regarding any move of the Oakland A's baseball franchise.

A few months ago, supervisors took a negative view of losing the A's, but now they feel it's inevitable.

The only ray of hope in keeping the A's in Oakland is the rumor of an all - black group, led by such luminaries as Redd Foxx, George Foreman and Bill Cosby, buying the A's. "We'd cooperate with that, too, if it happened," commented Supervisor Fred Cooper.

"We'd be very excited if a local group did keep the A's here," said Supervisor Joseph Bort.

"Maybe we could buy the A's ourselves with one year of federal revenue - sharing funds," quipped Supervisor Charles Santana.

Area woman claims county official lax

OAKLAND — A San Leandro resident who complained that Alameda County's building inspector passed allegedly faulty work by a contractor will air her complaint at a meeting of the county's consumer affairs commission at 9:15 a.m. today in Room 1018 at 1111 Jackson Street.

Kathleen Peterson also claimed that the county district attorney would not file fraud charges against the contractor and supposedly would not discuss the case with her. County supervisors have ordered the county administrator to research the allegations.

Dublin rezone

OAKLAND — A proposed rezoning of 18 acres near Dublin Iceland from single family housing to commercial and Edith Marshall's request to create eight homesites at Foothill Road and Castlewood Drive face supervisors today in their chambers at 1221 Oak St.

Anti-Bakke action

County takes stand

OAKLAND — Alameda County supervisors took an "anti - Bakke, pro - affirmative action" stand this week, but not as strong as first proposed.

A few weeks ago, the human relations commission suggested the supervisors send a resolution to the U.S. Supreme Court, which will rule on whether or not Alan Bakke was suffered "reverse discrimination" because of an affirmative action admissions program at the UC Davis medical school.

Supervisors decided not to lobby the Supreme Court, but the county's first black supervisor, John George, was absenton that vote. This week he brought up reconsideration of the idea, but when he learned that Nov. 16 was the cutoff date to file "friend of the court" briefs on the case, he changed the motion to one of commendation for the human relations commission for sending its own anti - Bakke resolution to the high court prior to the deadline.

In effect, the supervisors are telling Alameda County residents, but not Supreme Court justices, that the supervisors support affirmative action programs and hope the Supreme Court will rule against Bakke. The motion passed 3-0 with George, the county's first black supervisor, joined by Supervisor Fred Cooper, whose district includes many minorities in East Oakland, and Charles Santana, a Spanish - surnamed supervisor from Hayward.

The Valley's supervisor, Valerie Raymond, and Oakland's Joseph Bort, abstained. Both felt the Supreme Court ought to be free from lobbying by citizens in its deliberations. Raymond added she would have voted for a resolution reaffirming affirmative action plans. She thinks the Bakke decision, whichever way it goes, won't affect most affirmative action plans much.

George disagreed with Raymond. A pro - Bakke verdict will turn the nation toward a more bigoted social climate, said George. "People say that affirmative action is 'reverse discrimination,'" said George. "I think it is a 'way to reverse discrimination."

The nation has 300,000 doctors, only 5,000 of them black, said George, who doubted any of the white medical school graduates will open their offices in minority ghettoes. County supervisors are charged with correcting the maldistribution of health resources in the county and the Bakke case definitely bears on that, he said.

"Bakke was turned down at UC Davis medical school after applying to 13 medical schools, including the University of Minnesota, his alma mater. In all probablility, he was turned down because of his age.

"All of the minorities admitted at Davis (where Bakke claimed he was bumped for a minority person) were qualified. There was no lowering of standards to admit minorities," said George.

Livermore station wins extended use

LIVERMORE — The service station at 160 Holmes will continue to be a gas station, but with an improved landscaped appearance.

The Utah company, Flying J. Inc., sought unsuccessfully a month ago to rebuild and expand the facility for a gas and fast-lub station. However, planning commissioners were not happy with the proposed five-foot wide planters around the lot.

They felt the planters should be 10 feet wide along Holmes and Second Streets frontages. At the time Flying J Vice President Ron Brisendine said such wide planters would be impossible because of location of the gas pumps, which could not be moved closer to the building.

This week Flying J came back with a proposal to demolish the existing building and construct a smaller office structure. They will put in new pump islands to expand existing gas facility and build the 10-foot wide planters.

The company has decided to drop the fast lube proposal and make the business primarily a service station with gasoline sales.

Commissioners approved the new plans.

In other business, the planning commission sent to the city council recommendation of approval of a conditional use permit by William Nicolls to construct a handball and racquet ball recreation facility at the rear of 3981 First St. The facility will be beside the roller rink which was constructed last year.

But mmissioners forwarded to the council a recommendation to deny a dog grooming salon by Village Realty in the existing office building at 1827 Fourth St. They found the dog grooming salon a service use that is not similar to permitted office uses in the zoning district.

Don Couch has resigned as Granada High School's head football coach after four seasons.

Granada's Couch resigns

Don Couch, who brought Granada High School's football program to the top, has resigned as head coach of the Matadors.

Couch was head coach for four seasons, winning the East Bay Athletic League championship in 1975 and sharing it with Livermore in 1976.

No successor has been named. Principal Jack Snodgrass will consider applicants from both within and outside the district. Snodgrass hopes to have a coach named in time for spring practice in May.

Couch had a 27-14 record in his four-year stint as head football coach. His finest year was the 1975 season when the Matadors stunned favored Mission San Jose, 35-21 in the opening round of the North Coast Section 4-A playoffs. Pinole Valley defeated Granada 21-3 in the championship game.

Couch returned to coach at Granada after being at Livermore High School for several years without coaching. Previously he had coached the 'Pokes during some successful seasons.

He will continue to teach physical education at Granada.

Foli dealt to Mets

HONOLULU — The New York Mets acquired shorststop Tim Foli from the San Francisco Giants Wednesday in a deal completed at baseball's winter meetings.

In exchange for Foli, the Mets agreed to give the Giants cash or a player or players to be agreed upon by April 4, 1978.

Foli, who will be 27 Thursday, started his major league career with New York and spent parts of two seasons with the Mets before being traded to Montreal in 1972.

He played five years for the Expos, then was sent to the Giants last season in exchange for shortstop Chris Speier.

Foli batted .221 in 117 games last season, and had four home runs and 30 runs batted in.

He is expected to replace aging Bud Harrelson as the Mets's regular shortstop in 1978. Harrelson, 33, has been hampered by injuries for the last three seasons and Mets General Manager Joe MacDonald said he expected more offense than the light-hitting Harrelson has supplied.

"He can play shortstop very well," said Mets Manager Joe Torre. "He is sporadic. But he's only 27. He's young and he fits into our plans. He'll hit .260-.270."

Joe Altobelli, manager of the Giants, said Foli was dealt to make way for rookie Johnnie LeMaster.

LeMaster batted .149 in 68 games with the Giants last season.

"He (LeMaster) sat on the bench almost all last season and we decided we'd like to give him a chance," said Altobelli.

Controversy, tight bouts in 'Poke wrestling loss

Don't be fooled by the score of yesterday's pre - season wrestling match between Livermore High and Del Valle.

And don't fall into the trap of thinking that because the Cowboys dropped their third straight match without a win, 34-24, that the defending East Bay Athletic League champions won't challenge for the title again this time.

Livermore lost four matches by a combined spread of nine points while getting hit with controversial calls and a pin with one second left in the match.

It marked the first time that 'Poke coach Ed King used four of his wrestlers from last year's squad. Most of them came out with wins, but State meet competitor Naish Piazza lost his 145 - pound bout with Mike Wignot in the midst of a dry spell where the Cowboys failed to win any match from 120 to 154 pounds.

A strong rally by the heavyweights brought the 'Pokes to within 28-24 going into th heavyweight match. Del Valle had built up a 28-8 lead.

However, Matt Lyons of Del Valle pinned Livermore's Jim Deranger at 1:10 of the second round to end the match. Deranger was wrestling in his first match ever as the 'Pokes competed in their first two meets without a heavyweight.

"We're better than we looked," said King, "but we have a lot of young guys. We beat them pretty bad last year, so they were up for us. It was the first time to wrestle for a lot of these guys."

King, who had shuffled his junior varisty and varsity players in his first two meets against Tracy and Kennedy - Fremont, admitted last night's line-up was no impostor this time. "That's the guys, that's the team," he said.

The Bulldogs, who won their four conference games this fall, placed 13 players on the all-league first team. San Jose State and the University of Pacific had four first-teamers each while Cal State Fullerton filled two spots and Long Beach State one.

Cornerback Gerald Small of San Jose State was a first-team selection for the third straight year. Players picked for the second straight season were linebacker Dan Bunz of Long Beach State; defensive lineman Simon Peterson of Fresno State; cornerback Curtis Minor of Fresno State and kicker Vince Petrucci of Fresno State. - by Associated Press

AV opener

O'Dowd belts Washington

Guy Williams had a good game before 350 fans at Amador Valley High School's gymnasium last night.

The 6-foot-7 Bishop O'Dowd (Oakland) center tossed in 16 points as the Dragons dumped the outmanned Washington (Fremont) Huskies, 69-46, in the first round of the 16th Amador Basketball Classic.

But it was only that: a good, not a great, game for the returning all-East Bay senior. His coach, Al Ferreira, suggested Williams lacked inspiration.

"The bigger the opposition . . . . " Ferreira began, stopping himself with a quick, "I don't want to put anyone down.

"But, we played Oakland the other day — they've got a 6-foot-9 center — and he's goin' fruits," said Ferreira and, indeed, hard-working Bill Morones, the Huskies' 6-foot-4 center, was not quite up to the challenge.

In all likelihood, Williams, Ferreira, and the rest of the Dragons will get all the challanges they hope for — or dread tomorrow night.

Second-ranked Castlemont, leading host Amador Valley by six at haltime in last night's other first round game, is a good bet to be the opposition for the number five Dragons in their 8:30 p.m. semi-final Friday.

The Knights have 6-foot-6 John Washington and a host of others taller than two yards, but still are smaller when entire rostesr are compared.

"We match up well with them," Ferreira said. "But we'll have to control the tempo of the game."

That tempo isn't the running and shooting offense that marked smaller O'Dowd teams in the past.

"What I want to do with these guys is get the ball inside," the Dragon coach said. "If we do it under control though, we can run."

With Williams and 6-foot-3 garbageman Robbie Beal, who led all scorers with 19 points last night, running won't be a necessity until the Dragons are physically overmatched.

That didn't happen last night.

Washington went immediately to a spread offense to offset the superior size and speed of the the Dragons, but learned early they'd have problems when two of their first three shots were blocked by 6-foot-5 Dragon Jim Froning.

Although the Huskies were able to run their patterns well and passed crisply, a case of fumbling fingers negated the effect.

O'Dowd widened its lead for good with six straight points midway through the first period and built up a 23-point lead before Washington mounted its first damaging response in the second half.

With the Dragons ahead, 44-21, three minutes into the half, Washington ran off a 14-4 burst that brought them within 13.

But, even with Williams on the bench most of the last period, O'Dowd built its edge back to 24 on Dennis Acebo's drive 1:41 from the end.

The Dragons did all that with two men, Mike Herrick and rebounder Kevin President out with the flu.

Marty Mills led Washington with 15 points and Tim Henning added ten.

In tonight's other opening-round games, Arroyo of San Lorenzo meets A.A. Stagg of Stockton at 7 p.m. and Sacred Heart of San Francisco plays Foothill at 8:30.

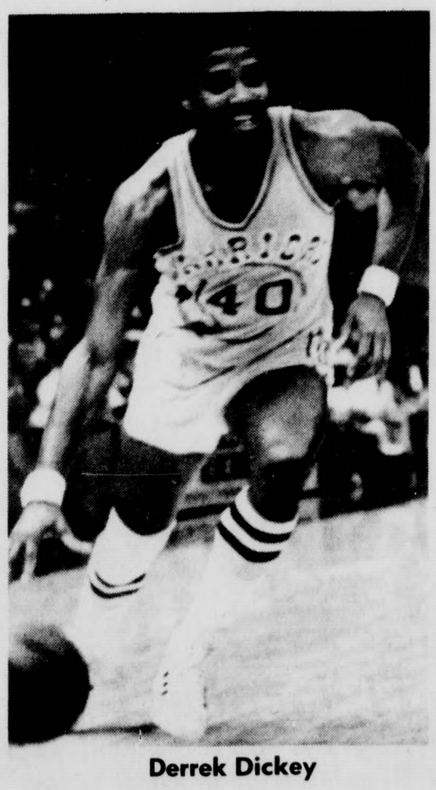
Warriors host Bucks

Can Dickey stay whole?



Derrek Dickey

OAKLAND — In 1973, the Golden State Warriors drafted a powerful young forward from the University of Cincinnati named Derrek Dickey.

Double D, he was quickly dubbed.

Two years later, Dwight Davis was acquired from Cleveland in a trade. Double D. Double Double D's.

Last season, the initials could easily have been a code for something other than the names. Dickey and Davis both missed large portions of the seasons with injuries.

Doubly Dumped. Dangerously Damaged.

Davis is now a man without a team. Injuries to his knee and hamstrings have left him a near cripple, as far as the cruel world of the National Basketball Association is concerned.

"Only the good Lord knows when I'll be back," Davis said during training camp. Golden State couldn't wait for divine intervention and waived Davis, though he attends every Warrior home game and hopes to be resigned some day.

Dickey finally came back Tuesday night against Houston at the Coliseum and will presumably play against Milwaukee tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the same building. He missed last year's play-offs with an ankle injury and, with a few good practice sessions under his belt this summer, slipped on a wet floor at San Jose City College and strained a ligament in his right big toe.

Fortunately, Dickey is one of those new-fangled athletes who doesn't believe the world begins and ends at the free throw line.

Rather than work himself into a lather, convincing himself beyond reason that the team needed him, Dickey sat on the bench, studying the game and waited for his unusual injury to heal. He barely touched a basketball, not even to shoot around by himself.

"There was no pressure on me," Dickey said evenly after scoring six points and grabbing five rebounds Tuesday. "I got to spend a lot of time with my family (wife Barbara and three children) which I don't get to do very often."

So, it was a seat on the bench, both at practice and games.

"I learned a lot by observing, even on the radio and TV, I thought what I could do to help in this or that situation," the 6-foot-7 Dickey.

Against the Rockets, in a see-saw game during which Golden State needed all the help it could get from Derrek's 13 minutes, Dickey said, "I was tired and my timing was off about three or four steps. It'll be at least a month before I can get into any kind of condition."

Rest got Dickey back into the line-up and ice on the afflicted foot may help keep him there — if nothing else goes wrong. It was the pain that bothered Derrek Tuesday and it wasn't the thought of re-injuring the toe, it was a memory of what had gone before and a healthy respect for the unexpected.

"I was just afraid," said Dickey with a tired smile, "I'd injure something else." — by Dave Weber

Taking the big step

On Sports

"If you want something, go get it," Tom Jackson said thoughtfully.

"I mean, really go after it," he emphasized.

Jackson is one to know. He wants something and along with friend Lou Plummer is plowing head - long to get it.

"I strongly believe that if you really want something in life, if you want it so badly that nothing can stop you from getting it, then you should pursue it with everything you've got."

Like the Denver Broncos barreling through NFL foes with steamengine power en route to what some believe will ultimately be the Super Bowl, Jackson and Plummer are carrying the same motto.

"You gotta believe."

Tom Jackson

The local business men believe they have what it takes to jump into the sports industry and purchase a chunk of a soccer franchise. Their decision should come any day now.

"We have the option of buying part of the St. Louis team in the North American Soccer League which is moving out to Orange County next spring," disclosed Jackson last week.

They'll each need to come up with $100,000 to make the purchase and in return each would wind - up with four percent of the new franchise.

"The final arrangements have not been made yet," noted Jackson, "because we haven't put the money on the table, but we're very serious about it."

What started on a whim has suddenly whacked the pair in the face.

"Lou came into my office about 14 weeks ago," remembered Jackson, one half of Jackson and Grable Realty of Alamo, "and said he wanted to purchase the San Jose Earthquakes. I couldn't believe the guy. I asked him what he was smoking."

But soon the ball was rolling.

Plummer investigated and discovered that the controlling interest of the 'Quakes had been sold to controlling owner Tony Kovac and that only small percentages of the club could be purchased.

That didn't stop Plummer, an energetic type, who continued his unstoppable pursuit. Plummer went to the phone, dialed New York and within 20 minutes was talking to NASL commissioner Phil Woosnam. How do you buy a soccer team he simply asked.

"When we got ahold of him," recalled Jackson, "that's when we really became interested because not only did we realize our potential, but discovered there was some money to be made in soccer. In a free entreprise system, that's what makes it go."

Soon after the telephone discussion, Plummer was airborne for the northwest to watch the New York Cosmos - Portland championship game, thanks to a Woosnam invitation.

There, he came in contact with owners, general managers, players from all over the league, and even had several visits with Woosnam, who talked of the league's predicted bright future.

"You should have heard the guy," reflcevted Jackson, recounting Plummer's wild enthusiasm. "He called me up one night from Portland and couldn't stop talking. He was really excited.

"He came back with all kinds of information and methods on how to get it going and it was no longer you. It was we."

More phone calls, lengthy discussions with NASL officials, constant travel and midnight coffee sessions produced the ultimate decision to buy into an existing franchise rather than buy one outright. Dollars figured into the investment, too.

"We both knew that it would take at least $290,000 to buy our own team," Jackson explained. "Well, we just didn't have that kind of money."

But they did have ambition. Talking to nearly every sort with big - time soccer in mind, the pair met head on with Paul Deece who once owned the San Diego and Las Vegas franchises and now owns the rights for soccer to be played in Orange County — a proposed hot bed for the sport. He told the pair that Las Vegas wanted to sell.

Deece, a likeable gent, corralled both Plummer and Jackson inside a smoke - filled room, closed the door and talked business with Vegas officials.

It was like a fairytale to Jackson.

"It was really funny," he laughed. "Here are two guys who didn't know a thing about buying a team two months earlier sitting in a smoke - filled room with a real heavyweight (Deece). I had read about these things in the newspapers but just couldn't believe I was doing it. You hear all the time about guys getting together to buy teams and here I was one of them."

The pair saw only disadvantages in purchasing a team outright, declined the Vegas offer and took their money elsewhere.

"Initially we negotiated with Las Vegas thinking it was the best team but when they offered to sell they couldn't come up with an agreement among themselves and we decided to get out," Jackson said.

It meant going back to the drawing board for the diehard investors.

Nest, the duo met Bob Herman, who owns controlling interest in the St. Louis Stars, ready to mkae their Southern California transfer next spring. Soon Plummer and Jackson got the tip and began knocking on the door.

"Again, Deece put us in touch with the right person," praised Jackson. "He's one of the nicest people you'll ever meet."

Now it's down to a waiting game whether the pair will lay down the dollars and cents for a percentage of the new Orange County team or hold on to their money and look elsewhere at another team.

"When we first started this thing we were going to buy a new franchise, start from scratch, but then realized it would be more profitable to buy into an existing team," Jackson said.

"All I know is it's been one helleva experience the last five months," declared Plummer, a Valley Realty salesman.

Granada wrestler wins Flecto award

Bill Freeman is a big reason why Granada High School's wrestling team is one of the favorites for the East Bay Athletic League crown and his performance in the Granada Invitational tournament last weekend showed why.

The senior won all four matches he competed in and took the 165-pound championship with two pins and two decisions. His performance helped Granada capture the tournament championship.

For his efforts Freeman is Alameda County's Flecto Prep of the week.

Freeman was also named Most Valuable Wrestler in the heavyweight classes.

Sandi Satre of Clayton Valley was the Contra Costa winner. A 5-9 senior she scored 41 points against Amador Valley in the Concord Invitational Basketball Tournament as CY took a tight 73-72 win. She also had 19 and 26 points respectively in the wins leading to the title contest. She was also a Flecto winner in volleyball.

EBAL soccer playoffs to include extra game

DANVILLE — East Bay Athletic League soccer teams will have the chance of competing against the Catholic League champion in Febuary.

The board also granted girls' athletic teams the right to compete in tournaments, both during the regular season and after the conclusion of the campaign. Formally, it has been against the bylaws to play in tournaments during the EBAL season.

The Board also granted girls' softball teams one additional practice game, moved the date of the final game of the 1978 football season to Nov. 9; granted a request for three additional volleyball matches and approved an additional tie-breaking proceedure for the Shaughnessy Basketball Playoffs with the EBAL.

The final football date was moved up to prevent a conflict with the Veterans' Day three-day weekend.

Sandia gets saltwater conversion report

Solar - powered distillation plants could convert sea water to fresh water at approximately the same cost as that of an oil-powered plant in 15 years, a report prepared for Sandia Laboratories in Livermore states.

The report, prepared by the Bechtel Corporation of San Francisco, says that the two distillation processes would cost about the same by 1992 assuming fuel oil prices rise at more than 5 percent per year.

The current cost to distill sea water in an oil-fired plant is estimated at $3.31 per 1,000 gallons of fresh water. To produce the same amount in a solar-powered plant would cost $7.69, the report states.

Currently, more than 600 million gallons of water is desalted daily worldwide, with distillation processes used widely in the Middle East where fresh water is scarce and fuel prices cheap.

Researchers chose as a model a five million gallon per day (mgd) conversion plant situated next to the sea. A 25 percent annual cloud cover was assumed.

If the solar-powered plant is created as a non-profit, nontaxable, publicly - owned enterprise, the report states, the cost to produce fresh water would about equal that of an oil-powered plant in 15 years.

The study group assumed no advances in solar energy technology in their model.

Bechtel recommends that researchers analyze the future overseas application of solar distillation technology and participate in federally - funded studies to gain further knowledge in the field.

Helping the coal search

A unique research project designed to study the equipment used in coal liquefaction systems is being undertaken jointly by engineers at the University of California's Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory (LBL) and the Ralph M. Parsons Company of Pasadena.

Its purpose is to determine how substances present in coal liquefaction — in particular, mixtures of liquids and pulverized coal called slurries — remove the metal surfaces of pumps. valves and piping. Coal liquefaction is a process that refines coal into a clean - burning solid or liquid.

According to LBL project leader Alan Levy, the program's objective is to provide data that will help engineers constructing large - scale coal liquefaction plants to select materials that make a plant's equipment more efficient and durable.

Levy, an engineer at LBL's Materials and Molecular Research Division, says the study is among the first to examine what happens when hot, erosive coal slurries are moved through pumps, piping and other components for long periods of time. He, together with University of California UC Berkeley engineering professor Israel Cornet and Walter Lockmann of the Parsons Co., plan to collect their data by exposing components of different shapes, sizes and materials to these slurries.

Their experimental set-up will try to simulate closely the conditions that occur in large-scale coal liquefaction plants. Each of the experiments will be run until measurable amounts of material are worn from the test samples and each will test the effects of a wide range of operating conditions common in coal liquefaction plants. These conditions include differences in the composition of the slurries, their temperature and the rate at which they flow.

Using chemical tests and powerful electron microscopes, Levy, Cornet and Lochmann hope to determine how and to what degree materials deteriorate under the test conditions.

The results will determine what the most durable materials are, what the most efficient configuration of various components should be and how long these components last before they need replacement.

The project is funded by the Materials and Components Operation part of the Fossil Energy Office of the U.S. Department of Energy.

Bay Area to Sacramento by boat

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A Sacramento man is seeking government approval of a plan calling for roundtrip steamboat service from San Francisco and Oakland to Sacramento beginning in late 1979.

Marshall Owen, president of Inland Waters, said Tuesday the trip would cost $60 per person round trip and would last most of the day, including two hours to wander around Sacramento's "Old Town" area.

The plan would need approval of the State Lands Commission and the City of Sacramento, which would have to approve any landing in Sacramento's Old Town area.

Ted Leonard, a spokesman for the Sacramento Housing and Redevelopment Agency, said his office will be advertising for proposals for this type of operation sometime in the near future.

"Inland Waters' proposal will be considered along with any others made," Leonard said. He added that more than one proposal of this sort might be approved.

One other proposal already submitted calls for steamboat service between Colusa and Walnut Grove by another private party, Leonard said.

Under Owen's proposal, a steam-powered stern wheeler would leave Oakland each day at 8:45 a.m., arrive at San Francisco at 9:30 a.m., leave for Sacramento at 10 a.m. and arrive at 5:30 p.m.

On the return trip, the boat would leave Sacramento at 7:30 p.m. and arrive at San Francisco at 12:45 a.m. and end up at Oakland at 2 a.m.

Owen declined to discuss details of financing the project. He said the boat alone would cost $8.5 million.

California's unemployed rate drops

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California's unemployment rate dropped from 7.6 percent in October to 7.2 percent in November, the state Employment Development Department said today.

But the number of jobless Californians increased by 4,700 to 680,600, the department said.

The decline in the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate came about because the increase in the unemployment rolls was not as large as normally occurs between October and November.

The 7.2 percent November figure compares to unemployment rates of 9.0 percent in November 1976 and 10.3 percent in November 1975.

The monthly report said 9,354,700 Californians were holding jobs in November. That is 72,800 fewer jobholders than the October employment figure, but an increase of 469,900 jobs over the past 12 months.

"Although unemployment was slightly up over the month and employment was down, the changes were less than normal for this time of year, when major cutbacks in outdoor activity and related work are expected, so the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate went down," the monthly unemployment report said.

Attic fans may not help

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A research project indicates that attic fans, which homeowners are encouraged to install to cut air conditioning bills, don't have that effect in properly insulated attics. The results of the project, sponsored by the Sacramento Municipal Utilities District at California State University, Sacramento, were reported Tuesday.

Charles Washburn, professor of mechanical engineering, said if an attic is properly insulated, an electric fan will cut electrical consumption of the air condition — but not enough to make up for consumption of the fan itself.

Washburn said the normal vents required by the building code already "do a good job" in ventilating attics.

The experiment was on a new home.

Attics that aren't insulated weren't considered.

State vs. aphrodisiac

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California has gone to court to try to block sale of an aphrodisiac known as "Captain Rush" on the grounds it contains a dangerous drug that could kill persons with certain health problems.

The suit was filed by the state attorney general's office Tuesday for the state Department of Health, which says Rush is a clear liquid that contains the drug butyl nitrate.

State health officials said it was probably the first suit of its kind in the nation against the product, which they said is advertised as an agent that increases sexual pleasure and prolongs or delays orgasms.

Dr. Jerome Lackner, director of the Department of Health, said butyl nitrate could cause blood pressure to drop and could cause death if used as advertised — by inhaling it.

The drug is particularly dangerous when used by patients with heart, repiratory or circulatory ailments, the department said. The suit contends Rush is distributed throughout California by Pacific Western Distributing Corporation and is sold mainly in adult book stores and sex novelty shops.

The suit seeks to ban further distribution of Rush and requests a $1,000 fine against the distributor and several sales outlets. Superior Court Judge Joseph Babich set Dec. 23 for a hearing on the suit.

Experts says the side effects of butyl nitrate include rapid heart beat, vomiting, loss of consciousness and dizziness.

Farmer wins award

FRESNO (AP) — Stanislaus County dairyman Wes Sawyer of Roberts Ferry has received the California Farm Bureau Federation's distinguished service award.

Sawyer was honored Tuesday during the Farm Bureau's annual convention for years of leadership in agriculture.

He has one of the nation's top Holstein herds and was named livestock man of the year in 1971 by the California Chamber of Commerce. The World Dairy Expo named Sawyer its man of the year in October.

The Farm Bureau also cited Bill Allison, farm editor for KMJ-TV here, as its agricultural newsperson of the year.

Closer to tax relief

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. said Wednesday he and leaders of the Legislature "are getting closer" to agreement on a multi - billion - dollar property tax relief bill.

"If there is good will on the parts of all segments of the executive branch and the Legislature, we could have a property tax bill in 100 days," Brown said after his second meeting in as many days with legislative leaders.

The welfare shift is the same idea which the Democratic governor outlined with Senate Democrats Tuesday.

'Gag' rule and the Altamont dump plan

A "gag" rule imposed by its own rules on members of the state solid waste management committee may be challenged in court by Alameda County Supervisor John George.

The "gag" rule could be a determining factor in whether or not the state issues a permit to Oakland Scavengers for a new dump in the Altamont, a request opposed by the cities of Livermore and Berkeley and several ecology groups.

The opponents say that a study of cost efficiencies would show that stronger recycling efforts and use of the Vasco Road dump would be cheaper for garbage ratepayers than driving an extra six miles to the Altamont. It also would be sounder because it would encourage more recycling.

George, who lives in Oakland, and Berkeley resident Ariel Parksinson, the two newsest members of the state panel, want to et comparison require such a cost comparison as part of the deliberations in issuing Oakland Scavengers a permit for the dump.

But a committee rule says that board members may not speak or vote on issues centered in their own districts. In effect, it means the two people most familiar and directly interested with the Altamont dump issue have been disenfranchised on the board, says George.

The committee chairman urged George to vote on the issue anyway, making it a test case. But George, an attorney, prefers to do his legal research first, then bring a case if he has the grounds.

Meanwhile George was encouraged that the panel last week did include one line in the permit procedures which could open the door to a cost - study requirement. The line said, "Supporting data and costs should be included in the proposed (Altamont) permit." George thinks that the cost - study requirement can be made part of the "supporting data."

The Altamont permit won't be decided finally until next summer, so George has some time to advance his cause.

The so - called "conflict of interest" annoys David Tam of Political Action Coalition for the Environment. He told The Times that the real conflict of interest on the board is that the two representatives of the garbage industry vote on procedures which will affect their industry, including their own firms.

He added that they don't vote on any items in their own districts, as per the board gag rule, and they also don't vote on any agenda items directly affecting only their own firms.

Pleasanton Vet's Hall is already a public gathering place.

County wants to open Vet's Halls

Pleasanton and Livermore have worked out ways of opening the local Veterans Halls to the public, but Alameda County supervisors are struggling for a way to do that among other county cities.

Supervisors said this week they want a study from County Administrator Loren Enoch about actual cost of operations of the facilities at various county locations.

The idea is to get the rentals cheap enough, at least for non - profit groups, so there will be more public use of the buildings.

The problem is that an old board policy prohibits rental of a Veterans Hall at rates cheaper than private club halls in the same community.

The idea behind the policy was to prevent the county - subsidized buildings from undercutting the rates of private halls. However, that seems not to be a problem today, said supervisors.

The rule keeps many non - profit groups from getting a hall anywhere, said Supervisor Valerie Raymond. The county ought to imitate Livermore where the park and recreation district will rent a hall for something like $4 per hour, she said.

But if rates become too low, it could cost the county money, said Supervisor Fred Cooper. What's worse, the rates could be so cheap that cities will use the halls more and the incentive to get them to take over the halls (a long - standing county policy) would be lost, said Cooper.

The staff will try to come up with a recommended rate scale to help non - profit groups while still making city takeover attractive.

Probe request into inmate cell search at Santa Rita

OAKLAND — Alameda County Supervisor John George plans to investigate charges that sheriff's deputies in one incident were "unreasonable" in their search of a men's barracks at Santa Rita County Jail.

Word reached George that a search was conducted by deputies in a manner in which things allegedly were thrown around. Supposedly that alleged deputy behavior provoked a prisoner to set fire to the barracks on Sept. 16.

George doesn't know whether the search was conducted rudely or if it even provoked the fire, but he wants to find out. All citizens, including those in jail, are entitled by the Constitution to "reasonable" search, said George, who is an attorney.

"The police have a right to search your house if they have a warrant, but the search has to be conducted reasonably. They don't have the right to throw things around," said George.

He's not saying that the deputies threw things around at Santa Rita, but a witness in the arson arraignment against inmate Clifford Caton alleged that they did.

The deputies searched the barracks for contraband, as they sometimes do. This time they "threw everything around and totaled the place out," alleged witness Michael Oyarzo. Supposedly that got Caton angry and allegedly he set the barracks afire Sept. 16.

Judge Mark Eaton ruled there has not been sufficient evidence to show that Caton set the fire. The district attorney has Caton before Eaton again to try to present more evidence for an indictment. Some determination is expected from Eaton Dec. 19.

Chief Bill Foster at Santa Rita told The Times he can't comment on the specific allegations by Oyarzo, but he feels there have been no violations of Constitutional search and seizure guarantees.

Whether it's a search of barracks or a home, if police are searching through socks and underwear, for example, to find contraband, "they won't get put back the same way. I don't think anyone expects underwear to be put back in the drawer; it would be left on the bed in an untidy position."

Allegedly prisoners are irked when deputies take things out of lockers and put them on the floor. Foster said that contraband is what goes on the floor and contraband, by definition, is what prisoners are not supposed to have. It's no longer theirs when it is confiscated.

Examples of contraband include drugs, weapons, and food stolen from the commissary. Food purchased from vending machines in the barracks is permitted, for example, candy bars.

If a personal search reveals serious contraband like drugs or weapons, it can result in new charges against the prisoner. If it's found on a shelf or some other place which cannot be connected to an individual, it is confiscated.

Here's what county's disabled people need to get along

By Alameda County Bureau

OAKLAND — Alameda County's estimated 45,107 developmentally disabled — those with autism, cerebral palsy, epilepsy, mental retardation, and neurological handicaps — need more and better counseling and some "respite facilities," county supervisors learned this week.

The developmentally disabled also need better public transportation designed for them, opportunities for independnent living, and expansion of vocational services, said the county's citizen - staffed developmental disabilities planning and advisory council.

The "respite facilities" are places where the developmentally disabled can be cared for on a temporary basis. These facilities are necessary because families become stressed and need respite from the daily care for developmentally disabled family members.

There are only three respite facilities in the Bay Area — Palo Alto and in Marin and Contra Costa counties. They take anywhere from five to 20 persons.

The planning council does not recommend building new facilities for respite, but rather a "foster home" setup where other specially - trained families would care for the individual for awhile.

Counseling is extremely important, said council members. Catholic Charities had an excellent counseling program in all five areas of developmental disability, but the program had to close down last year beacause the seed money evaporated and none was found to continue it, one council member told The Times.

Supervisors ordered staff to do a cost study of implementing the council's recommendations. They hope to be able to meet the recommendations as fully as possible.

One stumbling block is the county's apparent short share of state Short - Doyle medical funds. Supervisors will lobby Governor Brown to release more Short - Doyle for funds for county medical programs, then shift some county money over to the developmentally disabled requests.

Nearly 3 per cent of the county's population, or an estimated 45,107 of 1,110,552 residents, is developmentally disabled. An estimated 13,958 residents receive services from the county, with 686 in state hospitals, the remainder in community programs.

There have been projects to indentify the unserved persons with developmental disabilities, reported the committee.

WE KNOW WHAT YOU MEAN WHEN YOU'RE TALKING PARTS.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I'm dating a guy, or to be more precise, we've been sharing a pad for about seven months. I think he loves me, at least he says he does, but he's weird in that he doesn't like to touch unless it involves sex. I can almost feel him shrink away if I take his arm when we're walking, or if we're doing dishes. I've mentioned it to him but he doesn't seem to be aware of it. He always counters by joking about how no one's ever complained he isn't sexy. He doesn't seem to understand that that has nothing to do with what I'm talking about. Is there something wrong with me? — D.O.

DEAR D.O.: I doubt that it has anything to do with you. I suspect this is something that originated in his childhood. Unfortunately. many parents are reluctant to touch their children and to express their affection in any physical way and they're more apt to withhold cuddling and hugging from a male child than they are from a daughter, fearing that any display of affection will have adverse effects on a boy.

Of course, just the reverse is true. Studies have revealed that lots of physical affection not only helps children become more loving, it may also prevent them from becoming violent, tense and uncommunicative adults.

Lack of cuddling can hurt infants in many ways. Those who don't receive enough touch stimulation early in life are much more apt to have problems with relationships later in life. They can actually rub people the wrong way.

I suggest you discuss this further with your friend and encourage him to try touching more frequently when there are no sexual overtones, not just with you' but with older people, children and friends of both sexes. He needs to learn that touch is a way of showing he cares.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: Why is it so important for some people to drive themselves though they don't need the financial rewards from their work. My wife and I have worked all of our lives and I was looking forward to retirement when we could travel. But my wife, who is 68, won't quit. She makes children's clothing for a small shop with a rich clientele. She makes a good deal of money, but we don't need it.

I wonder if it would've been different if we had had children. I've always been proud of her, but right now, I'd be a lot prouder if she'd take the time to enjoy life with me. — J.P.

DEAR J.P.: Some people find it hard to stop working because their whole image of themselves is linked with their work. What they need is to identify themselves in a new way unrelated to any particular job. They have to learn to see themselves for what they are as human beings, rather than what they do for a living. These are not necessarily closely linked. Your wife has to find new ways to gain self-esteem and to appreciate herself.

It sounds to me as if she suffers from what Dr. Alvinn Goldfarb calls the Sunday neurosis, a feeling of being threatened by any leisure time, and of being comfortable, secure and self-respecting only when working.

I suspect this may have been heightened in your wife's case because she didn't have children. She may falsely consider childlessness as worthlessness. She may still be struggling with an unconscious guilt about not having children. Talk with her about these possibilities, discuss them, and you may be albe to help her break her work habit by facing up to the truth.

Johnny Wonder's QUESTION CORNER

Frankfurters (usually called hot dogs) are a favorite American food. Frankfurters are a kind of spicy sausage made of chopped and seasoned meat.

To make frankfurters, the sausage maker puts the ground-up sausage mixture into a sausage-stuffing machine. The meat is squeezed through a nozzle into a long, folded sausage casing (skin).

As the skin is stuffed, it unfolds into a block-long frankfurter. Another machine pinches and nips the long sausage into a string of frankfurters small enough to fit in a bun.

Next, the frankfurters are cooked and smoked to give them a destinctive flavor. The skins are often removed before they are sold.

The frankfurter, named for Frankfurt, Germany (where the popular sausage was first made), got its nickname "hot dog" because of the humorous resemblance between a long frankfurter and a dachshund dog, and because it is served hot.

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB--I read your column on developing muscles, and I am interested in body building. I am 38 years old. Is meat protein as good as mild protein in muscle growth?

I get over 100 grams of protein a day from meat and milk. How can I tell what portion of the protein I use for growth and what portion is waste?

Why are my muscles sore the day after a workout? Should I skip the next workout if my muscles are still sore?

DEAR READER—Meat protein is the best of all protein for muscle growth. Why? Since it is muscle, it contains about the same amounts of the various amino acids your body will use to build muscle.

Milk protein is fine, too. Just be sure you are getting complete protein containing all the essential amino acids that your body cannot manufacture in sufficient quantities.

Your body can manufacture most amino acids from different proteins and even by adding an ammonia group to glucose from sugar and fatty acids from fat, except the essential amono acids. The ability of the body to change one amino acid into another makes it possible for you to use a variety of different proteins and let your body use or make the amino acids it needs to make any protein, whether it is to build muscles or to make enzymes or hormones.

In your age group, an optimal diet should contain 56 grams of protein and enough total calories from all sources for your total energy needs. That means your diet contains 44 more grams of protein than you need, or over 300 extra grams a week. That is quite adequate for you to develop a pound of muscle a week if your work program stimulates your muscle growth enough. A pound of new muscle only requires 100 grams of protein. Of course, just eating the protein won't do it. The work is what stimulates the muscle growth, and you won't be able to grow a pound of muscle a week with any program.

Too much muscle soreness means you are overdoing your exercise program, either in the size of the load you are using or the number of contractions you are doing. See The Health Letter I am sending you for more details. Remember to train, not strain.

You can exercise again at the next session after laying off a day, but I would advise decreasing the amount of exercise if you still have muscle soreness. Muscle soreness sometimes means muscle fiber damage, and you do not want that if you want to grow healthy muscle fiber.

win at bridge

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Jim Jacoby is writing today's article as a 75th birthday present to his father.

Dad has been playing a long time, but this 40-year-old hand which has appeared before in this column and many books is still his favorite. The game was rubber bridge and back in those early days Dad opened four-card spade suits regularly.

West might have tried an immediate seven hearts but West figured that such a bid would get a seven-spade sacrifice against it. Hence, his decision to double. West continued his deceptive tactics by bidding just five and six hearts. Dad fell into the trap and doubled, but West couldn't stand prosperity. He redoubled.

North, the late Charles Lockett of St. Louis passed. He was not a rescuer but Dad was. He rescued himself to six spades and went on to seven after West went to seven hearts. By this time he knew West held 13 red cards.

The play was simple. At least Dad thinks so. He ruffed the diamond lead with the eight (a heart lead would have beaten the hand), led trump, finessed his six, ruffed a diamond high, finessed his nine of trumps, ruffed the last diamond with dummy's last trump, came to his hand with the ace of clubs, cashed his ace-king of trumps and wound up by chucking his losing hearts on long clubs.

Grandma's for burgs and shakes

PLEASANTON — Tiny Grandma's on Main Street doesn't have a plush dining room with a lot of fancy decorations. But that's not why so many downtown employees and students congregate there for lunch.

It's a basic principle of economics teamed up with quantity food that makes Tiny Grandma's so popular. The consensus of The Times staff shows many varied reasons why those individuals take a short walk there at noon.

Tom says he likes the way Grandma piles on the turkey when making that special sandwich on a French roll. Bill says Grandma's heap-big hamburgers are the best — not too greasy on a toasted bun. Judy pays tribute to Grandma's bar-b-cue beef which she regards as a lip smacking bargain. Keith likes Grandma's tender tender French fries because they don't taste like they were deep fried with a batch of fish sticks. Mike has never been there but he's heard a lot about Grandma's thick milk shakes.

Don't look for a neon sign if you want to locate Grandma's. All you'll find is a card board sign in the window and a lot of kids loafin' around out front.

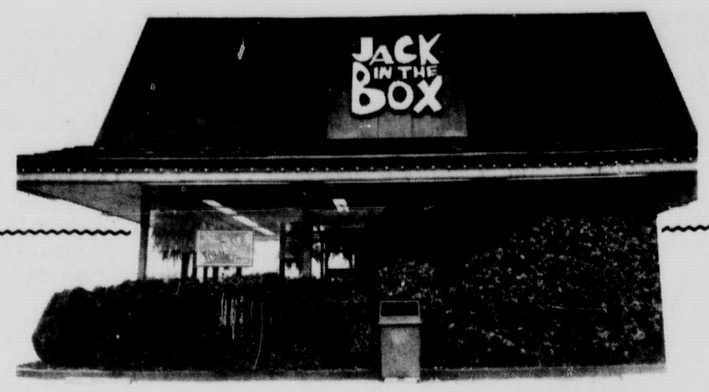
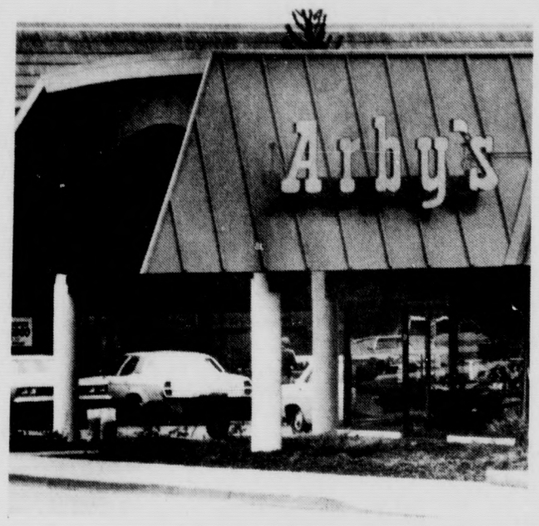
Dublin's fast foods are booming and booming





And Wendy's is coming real soon

There's no doubt about it.

Dublin is paradise for fast food restaurant investors who are looking for a place to peddle their quarter pounders, tacos, pizzas, roast beef sandwiches, and what ever else the public is willing to gorge when hunger pains strike.

And, there are good reasons for fast food chains to locate there. First, since Dublin is an unincorporated area rather than a city, it makes it easy for these chain establishments to duck zoning requirements. As Nancy Feeley of the Dublin Chamber of Commerce pointed out, these fast food establishments only need approval from Alameda County for zoning requirements.

Another reason Dublin is such a nest egg for on-the-run restaurants is its location ideally situated at the intersection of two freeways, I-580 and I-680. It's a business hub complete with shopping centers, many places of employment, and excellent transportation outlets such as BART and feeder busses in addition to the freeways.

But some wonder whether all these fast food competitors are strangling the market by spreading the customers too thin. Take for example the ideas of one concerned business partner, Norm Strehle, who is comanager at Burger Pit when he's not tending to Cactus Jack's restaurant in Livermore.

Strehle said that nobody is doing any research on what effect new establishments are having on the business that is already there. "Only so many people come into Dublin looking for a place to eat," he said. "Before we would each get our fair share of the pie. Now the pie slices are getting thinner and thinner."

Strehle blamed this decline in business on a "lack of supervision," and "lack of control on issuance of building permits." He noted that even though a new shopping center is being built near the Burger Pit, it won't do them any good because a Sizzler will be opening right behind his restaurant.

"It's going to be just like Las Vegas," he added. "Instead of casino after casino after casino, it will be restaurant after restaurant, after restaurant."

There's one intersection in particular — the intersection of Dublin Boulevard and Village Parkway — that Strehle claims is taking its toll of the business from restaurants farther away from that corner.

Chamber of Commerce records indicate that "by a flip of a coin" McDonalds and Jack-in-the-Box were first to set up there with construction under way in 1969 and grand openings in the early part of 1970.

Next El Taco and Casper's Hot Dogs had a dead heat for opening their doors on Village Parkway. Then the rest of the fast food chains made a spread of the early 70's with Taco Bell, Carl's Jr. and Arby's Roast Beef tackling the market.

But the boom is not over with — Wendy's will be here soon.

Bud and Miller fight the battle of beers

NEW YORK (AP) — It was viewed at first as another strategem in the bruising competition between the nation's two biggest brewers, Anheuser-Busch, sometimes called the king, and Miller Brewing, a growing, aggressive marketer.

It appears now that the issues may be more than a tempest in a bottle.

Involved are accusations of deliberate misrepresentation and exploitation of consumers, and claims that the news media and a government agency are being "used."

On November 10, Anheuser-Busch filed with the Federal Trade Commission a request for an investigation of Miller, its parent, Philip Morris, Inc., and its advertising agency, McCann-Erickson Worldwide. Miller, said A-B, has been improperly insinuating that Lowenbrau, a quality beer that it distributes, is the original imported product that connoisseurs have savored for nearly five centuries, when in fact Miller now brews it domestically.

McCann-Erickson declined to comment, but the response from Miller was immediate and spirited. "We find it incredulous that the world's largest brewer would ask the FTC to protect them," it said, adding pointedly:

"It seems apparent that the crown on the King of Beers must be slipping."

But a study of the 32-page statement filed by A-B indicates that its accusations were motivated by more than, as Miller suggested, Lowenbrau's success in the "superpremium" market, where it competes with A-B Michelob.

Perhaps most importantly, AB claimed that domestic Lowenbrau isn't even the same beer that it said the consumer market was led to believe was a successor to that which was first tapped from a keg in 1383.

It isn't, said A-B, even the same beer that was until recently imported from Germany, but which Miller now makes in the United States under a licensing agreement.

Contacted at the Lowenbrau Brewery in Germany, a spokesman seemed to concur. The domestic product he said, is "sort of a light beer that has been tested and found good for American tastes." A-B listed these specifics in its complaint:

1. German-brewed Lowenbrau is made with 100 percent barley malt and no adjuncts. Domestic Lowenbrau is 72 per cent (by weight) barley malt and 28 per cent corn grits.

2. German-brewed Lowenbrau contains no non-natural additives. Domestic Lowenbrau contains potassium meta bisulfate, an anti-oxidant, and enzymatic chillproofing compound, as well as kelcoloid to improve foam.

3. The German product is naturally carbonated, or krausened. The domestic brew is carbonated non-naturally by injection of carbon dioxide.

El Vacquero's season twist

LIVERMORE — El Vaquero, the Mexican food hot spot on South "L" Street, is all geared up for Christmas this year with their pinatas and other seasonal decor.

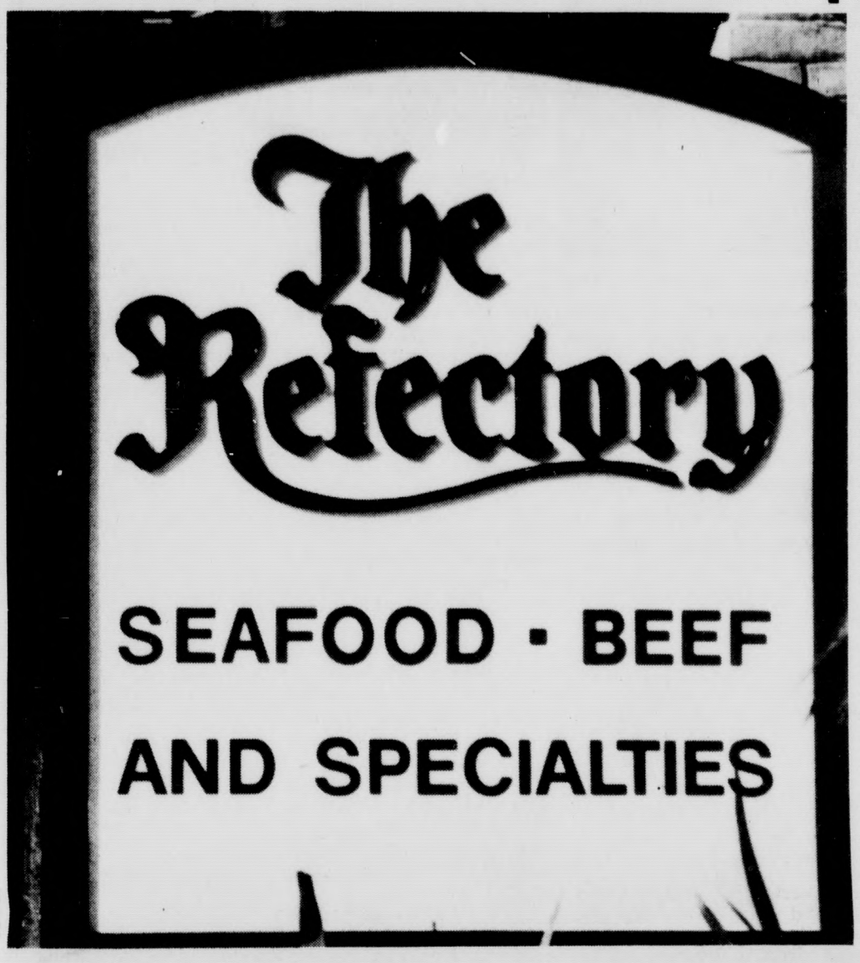
The folks who work there are really in the swing of the Christmas spirit from the cashier in her long white dress to the chef who produces piping hot "comidas Mexicanas."

They have a wide selection of tasty plates to choose from. For example , there's the Vaquero Favorito that is guaranteed to pop the buttons on your shirt. It includes a steak ranchero, chile relleno, rice beans and a salad. Their Mexican style steak is always fixed to perfeci $i as you ordered it.

An El Vaquero speciality that is very moderately priced is a plate of "Taquitos." This mouth-watering dish comes with two soft rolled tortillas filled with beef, quacamole and sour cream. Anyone who likes tender cuts of beef and heaps of quacamole should definitely induldge in this treat.

An excellent "Apetito" for any one of their specialties is an order of Machos Compuestos. These tortilla chips are individually layered with beans, cheese, guacamole and sour cream. There's something about the way these Nachos Compuestos come out of the oven that will make you order some more on your next visit without even looking at the menu.

Cut it thick and juicy



DUBLIN — The Refectory blends a dark private atmosphere with excellent food and service and presto — the perfect place to take that special someone.

Located at 6999 Dublin Blvd., just across the street from the Foremost Research Building, the Refectory offers a wide selection of meals to choose from with emphasis on beef and seafood.

Take for instance their "Bouillabaisse." This fisherman's delight includes the most succulent portions of crab, shrimp, clams and fish and combines them all into a saucy stew. The whole shabang is simmered in light bouillon, flavored with tomato, herbs, and spices and prepared to order.

Probably the most popular Refectory dinner is their outstanding cut of prime rib. The Refectory cut is not just your ordinary slab of prime rib. It is an extra thick hunk served au jus with creamed horseradish and traditional Yorkshire pudding.

For those who enjoy Alaskan king crab don't hesitate to try this dinner of legs steamed and served in the shell with lemon and drawn butter.

Class of '65 premieres tonight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Medved and David Wallechinsky may be the recipients of the best deal in television — they got $200,000 for the title of their book "What Really Happened to the Class of '65."

The NBC series based on that title premieres last week on Channels 3 and 4.

Their book documented the lives of 30 of their fellow graduates of Pacific Palisades High School, dubbed the "Golden Class" by Time magazine in 1965.

Universal Studios bought the book with the intention of turning it into a feature motion picture. But the movie was abandoned and NBC put it on its fall schedule as an anthology series.

NBC's original plan was to take the stories directly from the book, but executive producer Richard Irving said, "All of the stories were downers. These were the kids caught up in the world of the '60s, the protests, the drug culture, the breakdown of morality.

"The network did not think there would be an audience for that kind of thing."

NBC pulled the series off its fall schedule and sent it back to Universal for retooling. The result is that all of the real stories were dropped and NBC opted for an anthology series based on types.

For instance, what ever happened to the class clown, the class beauty, the class he-man, the class hustler, the valedictorian, and so on. The stories are all fictional and are not from the book.

Local merchants to get help fighting shoplifters

"Merry Christmas — You're busted!"

This is the title of a symposium on shoplifting sponsored by the Alameda County Sheriff's Department for area merchants, and it could be a familiar phrase during the holidayseason if businesses support the program.

Christmas time is the height of the shoplifting season and shoplifting is already on the upswing, the sheriff's department warns. Shoplifting not only raises the price of doing business, but raises the price consumers pay for merchandise as well.

A symposium for low-volume retail merchants will be held Tuesday, Dec. 13 at 7:30 a.m. at Shannon Community Center, located at 11600 Shannon Ave. in Dublin. Representatives from the sheriff's department will be present to answer questions about shoplifting, and a movie entitled "Sticky Fingers" will be shown.

Individual symposiums will be held at large retail stores.

For more information, contact the Crime Prevention Unit of the sheriff's department at 577-1048.

Non-union mines join strike

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Non-union coal mines are shutting down in the second day of a nationwide United Mine Workers strike, either in sympathy with the union or in reaction to determined union pickets.

UMW President Arnold Miller called the strike at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday, when the union's wage contract with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association expired after 60 days of fruitless bargaining.

The union has demanded restoration of full health benefits, a limited right to strike over local grievances and a wage increase from the current $60 a day to $114.36 over a proposed three-year contract span.

By Tuesday evening, non-union mines had closed in Ohio, Maryland and Kentucky. In West Virginia and Virginia, UMW members met to plan picketing at non-union mines to try to stop all coal movement during the strike.

The effects of the young strike were already obvious in the railroad industry, where about 3,500 employees have been furloughed.

The contract with the BCOA covered 130,000 union members — about 70 percent of the nation's miners who produce about 50 percent of the coal mined nationally.

Pickets in western Kentucky closed "a substantial number" of non-union mines, said Tommy Gaston, district president of UMW District 23 there.

"The plans are to shut down all the non-union mines in this territory," said Orie Hunt, president of a union local in Pike County, Ky.

Robert Carter, president of UMW District 30 based in eastern Kentucky, said picketing of non-union mines is not an official union activity, but "is up to the individual miners."

In southeastern Ohio, where non-union operations closed Tuesday in sympathy with the strikers, no picketing was reported.

A few pickets appeared in Maryland, but state mining administrator Tony Abar reported that most mines had closed out of concern that equipment might be vandalized or workers threatened.

The union's health funds, which are financed by the coal operators on the basis of production and man-hours, have been financially weakened by wildcat strikes and inflation in medical care costs. Reductions in benefits, announced in June, touched off a wildcat strike that lasted 10 weeks.

All medical, death, and retirement benefits ceased when the union went on strike; the UMW maintains no strike fund.

The bargaining sessions have been recessed until Thursday. In Washington, Miller said Tuesday the union has presented all its demands.

"We asked them (the operators) to come back with a complete counter proposal," he said.
